MEMBERS of the safety patrol at St. Damian School in Westland will be asking their fellow students for donations of food this week to help feed the hungry through Operation: Food Basket sponsored by the Automobile Club of Michigan.

"By involving the safety patrollers in Operation: Food Basket, we are broadening the scope of their school and community service and expanding the number of collection points for food," said Gerald Arbour, Auto Club's Wayne-Westland manager.

More than 3,200 safety patrol members at 108 Michigan schools are participating in the program. As of March 1, more than 101,000 pounds of food have been collected at Auto Club offices. Donations of non-perishable boxes items and canned goods are still being collected. The food collected locally will be distributed to families through the Wayne Metro Community Services Agency.

THE SEARCH is on! Each year Wayne Memorial High School honors a graduate who has made contributions to society with the Distinguished Alumni Award. Presentation of the award has become part of the annual commencement exercises at the high school.

Each winner receives a gold medal inscribed with the Wayne Memorial official seal. The graduate chosen is selected by a committee after a study of all nominees. Anyone wishing to nominate a graduate should contact Joyce Condra, secretary to principal Francis E. Winter, by calling 595-2200.

The winner will be announced by May 9, and the recipient will be honored June 4.

JOHAN SUTTON of Westland recently attended a week of education and training at the international headquarters for Mary Kay Cosmetics in Dallas. Sutton has been appointed director-in-qualification and travelled to Dallas to prepare her for the position of independent sales director. If she meets performance standards, she will be eligible for appointment as sales director on June 1.

FREE HEALTH screenings sponsored by the Peoples Community Hospital Authority will be provided Tuesday and Wednesday at Whittier Community Center, 28550 Ann Arbor Trail, in Westland for those age 60 and older. For an appointment call 722-3308.

PCHA also provides free health screenings at Annapolis Hospital in Wayne, also by appointment.

The Wayne County Health Department provides health screenings 8:45 a.m. to 2 p.m. every Thursday at the Whitman Center, 32235 West Chicago in Livonia, and every Tuesday at the department's offices on Merriman north of Michigan Ave. For appointments, call 729-2211, Ext. 258. A voluntary donation is expected.

TWO FRANKLIN High School students, seniors Ally L. Hunter and Robyn L. Whalen, have qualified as finalists in the 1983 Merit Scholarship Competition. Less than one-half of 1 percent of U.S. high school students reach finalist standing.

The scholarships are provided by more than 600 corporate organizations and educational institutions. This year's awards are worth $18 million and will be given to about 40 percent of the finalists.

Suit may trigger city director's firing

By Sandra Armbruster
editor

Next year's city budget will include funding for a director of the parks and recreation department, but that director may not be the same one who was laid off in January.

Mayor Charles Pickering laid off Ralph Tack in January as one of the first steps he took to correct the city's projected budget deficit.

Now, "based on review and study, I feel we need a director for that department," said Pickering, who has assumed responsibility for the department in addition to his duties as mayor.

IN THE meantime, however, Tack has filed suit against the mayor and the city, asking for overtime and severance pay he claims is due him.

"Basically, I want to work first of all, and I think it's unfair, unjust," said Tack.

A court hearing is expected in the case in several weeks, but Pickering has indicated Tack won't be recalled from layoff when the new budget takes effect on July 1.

"I would think there would be problems between Ralph and myself if he was recalled," said Pickering. "It (the lawsuit) certainly creates problems between the two of us that we may or may not be able to resolve."

Tack disagrees.

"Certainly, I can work with anyone," he said. "My track record has proven that."

PICKERING SAID there was "no problem (between them) before Ralph was laid off." He said, however, that "initially relations were strained" in 1978 after Tack was appointed director of the department.

Pickering had been assistant director at the time and was passed over for promotion when Tack was given the job.

Pickering said that he and his friends made Tack's appointment a public issue, but that over the last four years he and Tack "did our respective jobs" and tension eased.

"If I wanted to be vindictive, the most obvious thing would have been not to appoint him as director of parks and recreation," said Pickering. Pickering became major in 1982 and kept Tack as parks and recreation director. "I wouldn't have waited for a year."

Pickering said that the layoff was a budget move with a decision on recalling him to be made within six months to a year.

"The whole purpose was that it wasn't a permanent situation and consideration would be given to bringing him back," said Pickering. "Since then he has filed suit, challenging my authority for his layoff."

Pickering said that if Tack had been fired, he would have given him the severance, vacation and unused sick days pay.

Asked if Tack will be fired if he wins severance pay through the lawsuit, Pickering said, "I think that's true. I still have the option of who I want as director for parks and recreation.

"But there's no doubt in my mind that this (Tack's layoff) was not vindictive."

THE BUDGET, which will be presented to the city council on April 1, won't require any layoffs next year, according to Pickering.

He added that the budget will have a positive fund balance, maintain the same staff, correct a $275,000 deficit for this year and include few capital outlay purchases.

Pickering said that his budget proposal would call for a levy of the full eight mills possible, instead of the 7.16 mills levied this year.

Currently Pickering is negotiating with a candidate for the position of finance director, since Larry Williams, who has served a dual role as finance director and budget director, will be leaving his post soon. Pickering said the budget also funds the position of budget director, which was dropped as an economy move.

"Based on experience, the city definitely needs one," said Pickering.

The budget also calls for the city to continue operating the arena. Pickering said that the parks and recreation staff has made suggestions that will help to make it cost effective.

Last year the coucil vetoed the mayor's budget proposal. The city charter gives the council power to allocate funds.

Ice show culminates year of work

Leaning far back as she swings into a camel spin is Jill Nikischer. The 1983 ice revue will have a "show biz" theme.

When you think of 9,000 candy bars, what's the first thing that comes to mind? Dentist bills?

Well, think again, because members of the Westland Figure Skating Booster Club sold all those candy bars as well as raffle tickets to produce this year's ice revue at the Westland multi-purpose arena.

Booster club President David Runski said that more parents have joined the group this year than ever before.

Recognition of skating skill in the area is growing. The group was invited to perform at Joe Louis Arena for a benefit for Detroit's Mayor Coleman Young, but times conflicted with show dates.

Performances are 6:30 p.m. Thursday, 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 3 p.m. on Sunday at the Westland arena, Wildwood north of Ford. Ticket prices are $3 for adults and $1.50 for children under 16. Senior citizens tickets are $1.50 for the Thursday performance.

Tickets will be available at the door one hour before show time or call the arena at 729-4560.

THE SKATERS, who range in age from 3 years old through adult, are trained through the Westland Figure Skating Program. Performers have taken awards at competitions throughout the area.

Members of the booster club have worked all year on intricate stage and lighting effects, including a working water fountain, doll houses, boats with sales, a full-sized stage with staircases, trees, light posts, rainbows, rain and sunshine.

School board petitions now circulating, due April 11

At first glance, the number of candidates for two school board seats in the Wayne-Westland district may appear small.

But with less than a month before the filing deadline, the district is expecting a spurt in activity from candidates at any time.

As of Thursday morning, only one person had taken out petitions from the Wayne-Westland offices for the June 13 race, said Lorraine Roulo, Wayne-Westland election clerk.

"Several offices have the (petition) blanks," Roulo said. "All the school districts that conduct their own elections would have them. We have no way of knowing (the number) until they start filing them.

"Most of the action is from now until the election."

ALL CANDIDATES must turn in their petitions by 4 p.m. Monday, April 11. The petitions must be signed by at least 26 registered voters of the district. The maximum number of signatures on the petitions is 105.

"We always advise them to get a few more (than 26) signatures," Roulo said. "Some people think they are registered when they aren't."

Two four-year terms on the school board, those now filled by Board Secretary Mathew McCusker and Treasurer Sharon Scott, will be voted on. McCusker and Scott won a special election in December to fill two of four positions left vacant after a successful recall election in September.

As of last week, the election will be the only issue on the ballot, Roulo said.

School board candidates must be registered electors of the school district, which means they must be at least 18 and a citizen of the United States.

The most school board candidates appeared in last December's election, Roulo said.

"There were four seats available, and we had 10 candidates," she said.

The man who took out the petitions from her office this year might not be a candidate himself, she said.

"We've had a few forms taken out by one person," Roulo said. "I don't know if he's going to distribute them to other people. He wanted to have some on hand."

Bentley parents make final plea to board Monday night

By Teri Banas
staff writer

Tonight is the night Bentley High School parents and students have been preparing for the last few months.

Beginning at 8 p.m., the ad hoc group Committee to Maintain 4 High Schools will address the Livonia Board of Education, in what's been a four-month struggle to head off closing the high school.

Bentley, the oldest of the district's four high schools at 34 years, has been targeted for closure in June 1985 in a recommendation made by school superintendent George Garver last December. Since then, residents have rallied against the closing and attended a series of school board-sponsored public hearings on the question.

Tonight, the group will present alternatives to the school closure.

The meeting will be held in the board office, 15125 Farmington Road.

James Lynch, chairman of the 150-member committee, said he and other committee captains plan to press the school board to explore other alternatives in dealing with the district's financial problems. They expect to offer these proposals as alternatives to the school closing:

- The group maintains that schools with small enrollments should be considered by the school board. This belief has become a cornerstone of the parents' fight, primarily because of district projections that cite a continued drop in student numbers, which is the administration's chief argument for shutting Bentley. According to Garver, schools with small student populations are costly to maintain, and therefore students should be consolidated into fewer buildings.

Police search for robbery suspects

Westland police are continuing their search for three men who took an unknown amount of money from a McDonald's at Wayne Road, north of Palmer, last week.

Police said the three suspects entered the restaurant at around 6:45 a.m. last Thursday. One of the men, wearing white coveralls and a ski mask, held a handgun.

An employee was ordered to open a cash drawer and a safe, police said. Other workers and the four customers present were ordered into a back room and told to lie on the floor.

The men ran north from the location and jumped a fence. Police said no car was seen in the area.

The other two suspects wore dark clothing, according to police. One man wore goggles, while the other wore a blue and white bandanna as a mask.

Police said the suspects as black, and two of the robbers were 19 or 20 years old, five feet nine inches tall and weighing 120 pounds.

Technical set changes add to ice fantasy

Mechanical and technical improvements providing a world of fantasy and amazement for the show include toggle toys, dolls, and little black rain clouds, amid a "show biz" theme.

Besides individual and group numbers, the junior and senior precision teams will perform synchronized, highly skilled numbers.

Also performing in the show is the figure skating staff with Kathy Lenhardt as director. Instructors are Lana Krueger, Mary Anne Sage, Amye Schomberger and Paige Neumann.

Parents appeal to Livonia board

● Another issue they plan to argue is the restructuring of the current grade structure, Lynch said. The group is proposing a two-tier education structure, in grades K-8 and 9-12, which would eliminate the junior high level. "The overhead savings (in closing the district's four junior high schools) would exceed the money saved in closing Bentley," Lynch said.

● Instead of closing Bentley, the group proposes that available space in the building be used for other uses. Under a "shared space concept," Lynch said, space made available by declining enrollment could be filled with other district interests, such as for staff offices, for example. "Instead of moving students out of Bentley, move other facilities in with the students," Lynch said.

● Some discussion on the district's budget and finances also will be raised at the meeting tonight, Lynch said.

The group also plans to present the results of a survey it initiated earlier in its campaign. Of some 13,000 surveys (10,000 direct home distributions), there were more than 322 respondents, Lynch said. Some 296 of those said they were willing to "look at other alternatives" to the building closure, he said. Support for a four-high-school district generated 285 positive responses.

At best, Lynch said, he is hoping his group's work will encourage the school board to enact a community task force to explore in detail other alternatives to the closing of a high school.

But whether that suggestion is accepted appears unlikely. The board has already turned down the request at a meeting held in February. And members appear anxious to make some decision on the administration's recommendation soon. Earlier estimates put that decision some months before the end of the current school year.

These drunks escaped arrest

After completing (rather unsuccessfully) the course while under the influence, Rosanne Wienczak of Livonia walks away from the test car.

By Pat Waurzyniak
staff writer

Paul Pavloff climbed behind the wheel of the Pontiac LeMans, took aim at the row of orange pylons and jammed the accelerator to the floor. Seconds later, he lurched out of the car to survey the results of driving under the influence of liquor.

Pavloff, a 26-year-old Plymouth firefighter, volunteered as one of six guinea pigs for a drinking and driving test. The test was organized by the Downriver and Western Wayne Traffic Officials Association at Allen Park City Hall last week.

What he saw on the parking lot course wasn't reassuring.

'This is going to change my mind, that's for sure," said an intoxicated Pavloff after imbibing 10 ounces of Canadian Club whiskey, enough to register a 0.13 percent blood alcohol content (BAC).

'I'll admit it, yes, I've reformed," he said. 'I never really thought about it before — but I'm going to now.'

Joining Pavloff in a 9:45 a.m. drinking bout were Plymouth residents Peggy Anieros, Bob Ray and Cathy Richardson, Larry Moraco of Westland and Rosanne Wienczak of Livonia. All six drank enough liquor in two hours to reach a BAC (blood alcohol content) of more than 0.10 percent, the level considered legally drunk under Michigan law. New testing procedures and tighter drunk-driving penalties will take effect March 30.

SLURRED SPEECH, inability to concentrate and slowed physical reactions typified the volunteer "drunks" during a seminar which included field sobriety tests and a drive-on-a-short course.

Ray, a non-drinker, was unable to participate after passing out with a 0.12 percent BAC prior to the road test.

While the volunteers sampled gin, vodka, rum or whiskey during their drinking hour, police Breathalyzer operators measured their BAC three times.

Meanwhile, Lt. Thomas Garvale of the Michigan State Police post at Northville put each through standard tests routinely administered by officers to suspects prior to arrests for drunk driving. Each participant was asked to touch his or her nose, walk a straight line, recite the alphabet and count backward from 100.

Afterward, Plymouth Police Officer Bob Henry accompanied the drivers on the course designed to show the impaired reactions of a drunk driver.

Although the volunteers managed the slow 25 mph forward speeds, all had difficulty backing up. Each driver knocked over several pylons.

Public Acts 309, 310 and 311, Michigan's legislation passed last September to help nail drunk drivers, allows police to administer roadside checks of drivers' BAC with a portable breathalyzer test (PBT) device. That legislation includes the new "per se" law, which determines that a driver is intoxicated at 0.10 percent BAC whether or not he appears impaired.

Increasing public outcry over traffic fatalities, more than half caused by drunk drivers, helped push the bills through the Legislature late last year. Mothers Against Drunk Drivers (MADD) continues to raise public consciousness of problems caused by drinking drivers.

FOR EXAMPLE, five alcohol-related fatalities in the Plymouth-Canton area over the past four months spurred the Rev. Kenneth Gruebel of Geneva United Presbyterian Church in Canton to organize a MADD group.

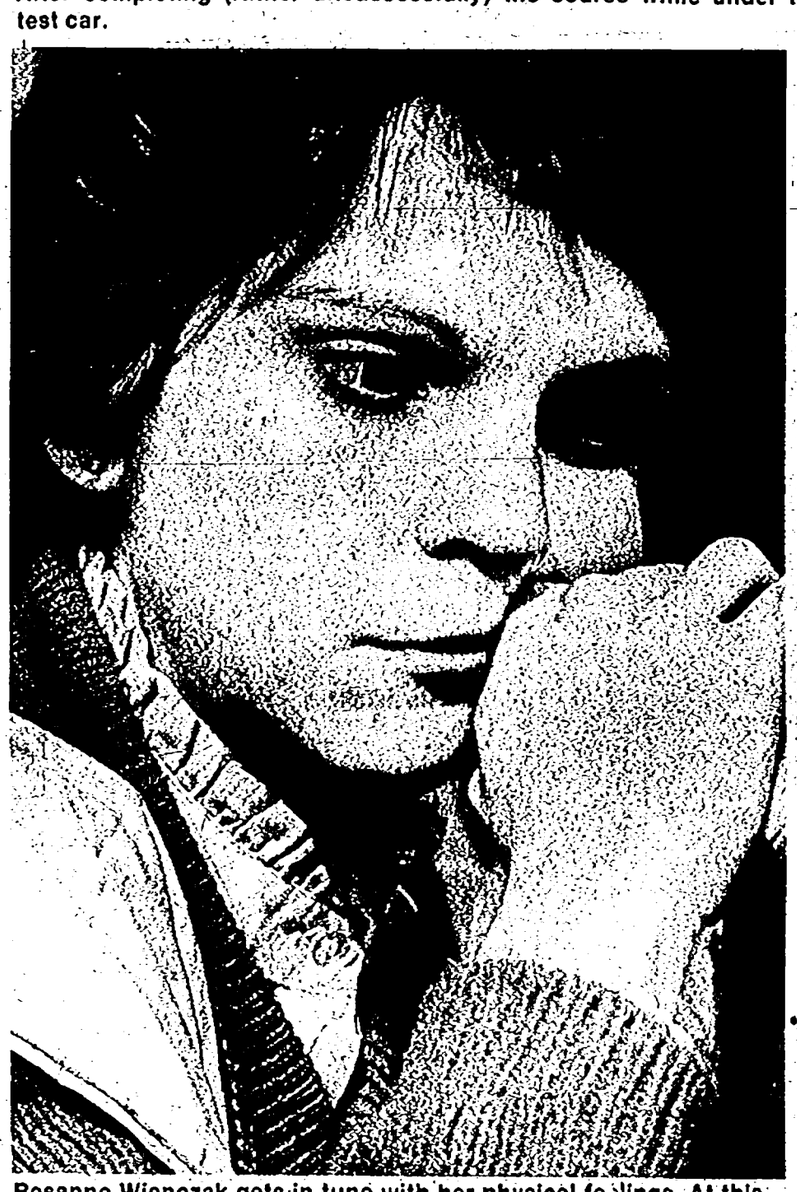
'Our primary concern is getting drunk drivers off the road, stripping them of their licenses," Gruebel said. 'We're trying to change the way the public and the courts are handling these cases.'

The six volunteers couldn't agree more after the drinking and driving program before an estimated 200 law enforcement officials from 37 communities in the western Wayne County and downriver area.

"I'm losing a day's pay," Ray, an employee at Rock Tool & Machine on Five Mile, said before he started drinking. 'I thought it was worthwhile, and I'm glad to see the law is being changed." Anieros, a part-time Plymouth Police Department dispatcher, summed it up best immediately after her unsuccessful attempt to negotiate the course while being the most intoxicated (0.14 percent BAC) of the five drivers.

"I'm an intelligent drunk — that's the worst kind," Anieros said.

"If you've survived in the past, you've been lucky. Yeah, I learned a lesson out there."



Rosanne Wienczak gets in tune with her physical feelings. At this point, she is legally drunk.

Grimm's fairy tales production coming

A collection of Grimm's fairy tales will come to life on the Maplewood Community Center stage March 23.

Sponsored by the Garden City Parks and Recreation Department,the live theater production for children will feature the Actor's Alliance Theatre Company.

The show is called "Story Theatre," a collection of Grimm's tales performed by a troupe of six performers who play different roles.

A company spokesman said the troupe uses theater techniques "which stretch the imagination by using only small costume pieces and with the exception of three cubs, two ladders asnd a hoola-hoop, no set pieces.

"The audience is required to imagine the sea, a humble cottage, a forest, a robber's den, a count's palace — all from the combination of narrative and imaginative acting."

The troupe will perform five of the following six Grimm tales: "The Little Peasant," "Bremen Town Musicians," "Henny-Penny," "Is He Fat?" "Master Thief," "Two Crows," "The Fisherman and His Wife," and "The Golden Goose."

The show lasts one hour, followed by snacks and a chance for the audience to visit with cast members.

The show begins at 7 p.m.

Tickets are $2.50 and may be reserved by calling Maplewood Center at 421-0610.

Westland woman ponders winnings

What would you do with $50,000 in U.S. savings bonds if you learned you just won that prize in a national sweepstakes?

That's the "problem" that Barbara E. La Londe, 48, of Westland is wrestling with. La Londe never gave the possibility much thought when she filled out an entry blank for the Mennen Company's national Financial Security Sweepstakes at her local Sentry Drug Store.

After all, it's always someone else who wins the grand prize, right?

Wrong! Mennen has just informed a still-shocked La Londe that she indeed won the first prize in its national sweepstakes. Monday a company representative will verify it by putting the $50,000 bond into her hands.

A homemaker and longtime Westland resident, La Londe's husband, Raymond, is employed as a millwright with Ford Motor Company in Wayne. They have three children.

La Londe's interests include classical music, reading, sailing and refunding, which is collecting refund coupons and exchanging them with other refunders.

She still hasn't decided what she'll do with her windfall.

"At this time, I like the idea of putting the bonds away as financial security," she said.

PREVENTION OF OSTEOPOROSIS

Osteoporosis is a condition in which calcium leaks from the bones, the problem particularly plagues women in the postmenopausal state. The effect is profound in the back, as the weight of the body compresses the vertebrae in the lower part of the back, causing these vertebrae to impinge upon the surrounding nerves and tendons. The ensuing pain can be both chronic and incapacitating.

Medical authorities have advocated various therapies to prevent osteoporosis. For instance some physicians say that beginning in menopause, a woman should take 1 gram-1.5 grams of supplemental calcium a day for the rest of her life. Other authorities recommend that a postmenopausal woman, under a physican's guidance, take estrogen and progesterone daily as these hormones seem to retard osteoporosis. Currently, investigators are testing the effect of daily fluoride tablets to stop osteoporosis.

I am skeptical of these treatments that encourage a woman to begin a lifetime habit of medication and repeated medical appointments.

There is an alternative that overcomes these objections, regular exercise. Lost in the discussions of alternative therapies is the observation that repetitive exercise provides the bone with a moderate stress. In turn this stress encourages the bone to keep building and remodeling in a fashion that prevents osteoporosis. Swimming, jogging, biking and walking are examples of suitable activities.

I would encourage a woman to look to exercise to prevent osteoporosis. To do so is to develop a way of life that does not depend on her doctors, but on her own efforts and sense of self-worth.

Dr. Weiss encourages questions from readers, please send your inquiries to his office.

GREATEST CAUSE OF TOOTH LOSS

Lack of cavities do not necessarily indicate a healthy mouth. In fact, you can lose all your teeth while never having a cavity. How? From "periodontal disease" - the greatest single cause of tooth loss in adults!

Periodontal disease is a condition involving gums, the tissues around the teeth, and even the supporting bone in advanced cases. Some of the symptoms are loosening of teeth, or bleeding, red, flabby or swelling gums.

In most cases, there is little or no pain at first, making it easy to convince yourself that there is nothing really wrong. Be aware of a passive attitude. It is estimated that 95% of the population has some kind of gum disease at some time in life, mostly after age 35.

There are home care regimens to prevent periodontal disease and dental treatments to stop it. But there is only one way to catch the problem. Get treatment in time - before serious damage is done.

Geography figures in Schoolcraft College election

Tim Richard

IT'S CRYSTAL clear to virtually everyone who cares anything about the community college that Schoolcraft's board is heavy with Livonia residents.

To refresh your memory, six of the seven trustees come from a school district with about half the college district's population. One comes from Plymouth-Canton, none from Clarenceville, Garden City or Northville.

Schoolcraft trustees know that and have been diligent in cultivating non-Livonian contacts. Indeed, these "Livonia" trustees have been far more sensitive to the feelings of the other four and a fraction districts which comprise Schoolcraft College than previous boards dominated by others.

Nevertheless, geographical diversity is likely to be of overriding importance as the 1983 election shapes up.

THAT'S RIGHT. There's an election this year, and it's a big one. Four trustees are to be elected June 13, at the same time you vote for your local school board members.

These trustees' terms are expiring, and all are from Livonia:

- Harry Greenleaf, board chair, works in engineering personnel at Ford Motor Co.; in his second term; has taken out petitions for new six-year term.
- Rosina Raymond, board treasurer, member since reapportionment in 1971; part-time college instructor; has taken out petitions for new six-year term.
- Len Wozniak, industrial salesman, completing first term; "gives the impression he'd rather be somewhere else," as a colleague succintly put it; seems unlikely to seek re-election to a six-year term.
- Sharon Sarris, former teacher now in cable TV sales; appointed to fill a vacancy last year; has announced she will run for the two remaining years in that term.

Holdover trustees include Michael Burley, Canton resident and administrator in the Northville school district; Laura Toy, Livonia resident and gift shop owner; and Paul Y. Kadish, insurance agent from Livonia.

Petition forms are available at the president's office. Petitions with at least 50 but no more than 200 signatures must be filed by 4 p.m. April 26 in the president's office. If you don't know where the president's office is, forget it.

LET'S LOOK at the board some other ways:

Sex — Four men, three women. The women all hail from the 2nd District Women's Political Caucus and can be fairly described as feminists. Despite these similarities, they have distinctly different personalities and approaches.

Politics — Once a divisive factor, partisanship has been muted and has virtually disappeared in recent years. Three have Republican backgrounds, four have Democratic leanings. All have political experience.

Occupations — A glut of educators in former years has been tempered with persons from industry and commerce.

The faculty factor — The board used to split regularly over the question of whether a faculty union lobbyist should sit with the trustees and have the speaking privileges of an elected board member without a vote. That idea has died a merciful death.

The faculty appears pleased with Richard McDowell, president since September of 1981, and isn't the hot issue it used to be. There are important union negoations going on, but they are hardly a campaign issue, unless I miss my guess.

The president — The "Pillsbury Dough Boy," as McDowell is fondly called — kept his promise to "hit the decks running" to serve industry with employee training programs. He is not an issue — quite the reverse: People can't say enough good about him.

SO WHAT IS there to think about in this campaign?

First, fund raising. There have been some layoffs. State aid has been cut, cut, cut. Rightly or wrongly, local property owners have said no to more taxes. Rightly or wrongly, the Reagan Administration is putting the clamps on federal student aids. Very wrongly, in my view, tuition has had to be increased, though Schoolcraft remains a relative bargain.

Clearly, the name of the game in the next term of office will be raising of private funds — for the college's foundation, for student aids, for equipment, for special programs. The game will be highly competitive because the big universities, the United Fund, public television, the churches and the charities are out there, too.

Second, evaluations. The current rage, adopted from industry, is an annual evaluation of the president and top administrators. State law requires that evaluations be performed in public, wisely, because it's the most important duty a board performs.

Unfortunately, many such evaluations covered by our newspapers have been either whitewashes, on the one hand, or political vendettas, on the other, and some boards have attempted secrecy gimmicks. Almost all public bodies need to learn how to perform positive, upbeat evaluations better.

Third, geographical balance. Livonians Greenleaf, Raymond and Sarris are tough campaigners and unlikely to be beaten. The smaller districts may want to get their act together and agree on the fourth candidate rather than splitting up.

And if their candidate knows something about fund raising and performance evaluations, so much the better.

Prominent Watergate figures aren't really winners

Bob Wisler

THE NEWS that Frank Wills was arrested for stealing a pair of gym shoes sparked another round of remembrances of the interesting era known as Watergate.

Wills was the man who opened the floodgates of Watergate by discovering evidence of burglary inside the hotel-office complex.

A private guard making his rounds, he found a taped door — taped to allow an easier getaway — and called police to report his suspicions. Washington D.C. police soon made the arrests inside Democratic Party headquarters which eventually led to the resignation of a president.

A number of prominent people contributed money to aid Wills in an effort to keep him out jail.

Wills, a man who was almost a national hero, honored for his diligent adherence to duty after the Watergate fiasco unfolded, had indeed hit hard times.

THERE WERE inevitable comparisons between Wills' predicament and the fate of many of the prominent members of the Watergate bunch. It was noted by commentator Mike Royko that many of the top guns in the Nixon White House are enjoying more than comfortable lives after profiting from books, speeches and White House-days connections.

John Dean, the smooth-talking White House attorney, made a million from a book and TV movie and makes several thousand a speech.

Nixon advisor John Erlichman, who spent 18 months in jail, writes books. H.R. Haldeman, Nixon's main man in the White House, made money from a Watergate book and is vice president of a California real estate company.

G. Gordon Liddy, the White House's black bag man who refused to talk to get out of jail, spent 52 months in prison but now earns a comfortable living giving speeches, mostly on college campuses.

RICHARD NIXON, old tricky Dick, of course, was pardoned by President Gerald Ford, and has made huge sums writing books in his own defense and being interviewed on television.

It may seem a bit unfair to those of us who plod along day by day with no hope of a big payoff for notoriety and only the expectation that if we work hard and everything goes well, we will stay even with the economy.

We tend to think that those who have accumulated wealth by chance or good fortune have also resolved life's problems, that they are indeed free from our mundane worries, even if the largesse that frees them is tainted or undeserved.

WHAT ISN'T reported, however, is the amount of misery that each of those who were part of the Watergate-era must feel when they reflect on what they might have accomplished and what they failed to accomplish.

In fact, they left the White House, individually and in groups, in public disgrace. The infamy that surrounded them will be with them to some degree evermore and cashing in on their notoriety does not erase from our minds the fact that they betrayed the public's trust.

They will always know that they had the chance to contribute something good to their country, and instead they contributed scandal and ample reason to distrust government.

There is a price to pay for everything. The price that the Watergaters are paying for their infamous actions and the earnings of that infamy is not readily apparent, but we can be sure that it is being paid.

I wonder, if we knew all the circumstances of their lives, would we feel even a twinge of envy?

Senators agree

2-party tax compromise shapes up

By Tim Richard
staff writer

A State Senate committee later today is expected to report out an income tax increase bill smaller than Gov. James J. Blanchard is asking but with bipartisan support.

"A one percent increase for no more than 18 months could get a majority of both party caucuses," said Sen. Richard Posthumus, R-Lowell, minority vice-chairman of the tax writing Senate Finance Committee.

"We will make sufficient adjustments to get some Republican support," added Sen. Philip Mastin, D-Pontiac, majority vice-chairman of the key committee. "We may not get 15 or even 10 Republican votes. Maybe four or five."

If they are correct, a bipartisan Senate vote for a tax increase would be in stark contrast to the House of Representatives, which on March 2 supported one by 59-51, with all 47 Republicans opposing it.

In the Senate, Democrats have a bare 20-18 majority, but at least two Democrats would likely oppose Blanchard's proposal. Thus, any tax increase will need support from both parties.

The first-term senators Friday addressed a government relations round table of the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce, held in the headquarters of K mart Corp. in Troy.

THEIR GUESSES of bipartisan support came only a day after Senate Republican Leader John Engler of Mt. Pleasant announced a majority of the 18 Republicans would support a scaled-down version of the Democratic governor's plan. The GOP would:

- Increase the state personal income tax by 1 percent for nine months — from last Jan. 1 to the end of the fiscal year Sept. 30. (Blanchard asked a temporary debt retirement increase of 0.25 percent and a permanent operating increase of 1.5 percent.) The current rate is 4.6 percent.
- Make "improvements" in the single business tax (SBT), which is essentially a payroll tax. Posthumus gave three examples: taking workers' compensation charges out of the tax base, taking unemployment comp taxes out of the base and allowing a credit for low-profit firms. He did not elaborate. (Blanchard's plan does not address the SBT.)

Posthumus said Republicans are concerned that the tax be levied only as long as necessary, and that the long-term business climate be the prime concern. After nine months, he said, Republicans would be willing to consider whether the tax needed extension.

THE ECONOMIC outlook divided the Democratic and Republican tax spokesmen more than their tax views.

Said Democrat Mastin, a three-term state representative and Pontiac city manager before his victory over incumbent Donald Bishop last year:

"Sen. Engler supported a short-term (six months) tax last year. It may be Sen. Engler is incapable of learning from past mistakes. . . . There has been a consistent overestimation of revenue and underestimation of expenses. We have a tradition of guessing wrong. Every time. I tend to be pessimistic about the immediate economic future."

Said Republican Posthumus, who carried a "conservative Dutch" agricultural district east of Grand Rapids:

"I would disagree significantly. State Treasurer Bob Bowman is the only one predicting a billion-dollar deficit. He's out there by himself. We don't believe the deficit is as bad as Treasurer Bowman says."

BLANCHARD'S Office of Management and Budget bases its prediction of a $900 million current year deficit on an economy that sells eight million autos, a zero increase in the gross national product and an unemployment rate of 16.5 percent.

But the Senate Fiscal Agency, a staff arm of the Senate, forecasts a $656 million deficit, 8.9 million auto sales, a 1.6 percent increase in the GNP and an unemployment rate dropping to 15 percent, according to Republicans.

As they were speaking, the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce was sending out a news release reporting a 10.1 percent increase in retail sales in metropolitan Detroit for the month of February compared with February of 1982.

THE HOUSE bill gave Blanchard his 0.25 percent increase to retire the accumulated debt and 1.5 percent tied to unemployment. For each 0.75 percent the jobless rate falls, the tax rate would drop 0.1 percent.

Mastin, in a recent letter, said spending cuts must be made before or simultaneously with an income tax increase, and that spending cuts alone won't resolve the deficit. Mastin added a tax increase should be only temporary, and that there must be guarantees the state won't spend any "windfall" from larger-than-expected revenues.

Republicans, however, are predicting just such a windfall if Blanchard's request is passed.

The Blanchard-House 1.5 percent increase would yield a $290 million surplus by the end of the current fiscal year, they said. In contrast, the Republican 1 percent hike would yield only a $47 million surplus, and it would be designated for a "working capital reserve" account.

Mastin said he would be "very interested in offering Michigan voters the opportunity to shift next year from any income tax increase adopted by the legislature to a sales tax increase adopted by the people," pointing out a sales tax would raise revenue from non-resident tourists.

U-M's Shapiro calls tax hike 'courageous'

University of Michigan President Harold T. Shapiro expressed increasing concern at the proposed continuation of the deferral of state payments to state colleges and universities.

The proposal was made last week by state Treasurer Robert Bowman.

"We have received no state payments since Jan. 1," Shapiro said. "If the March payment is now added to the January and February deferrals, the university's general fund will have had to borrow more than $45 million simply to carry on the day-to-day operations of the university.

"This will cost the university nearly one-half million dollars per month in interest earnings alone. Further, it makes planning almost impossible."

Earlier, Shapiro praised the state House of Representatives for passage of the income tax increase as the necessary first step in solving the state's fiscal crisis.

"In my opinion, House Speaker Gary Owen and his colleagues have taken a courageous action in adopting this measure," Shapiro said. "While I personally favored Gov. Blanchard's proposal for a permanent tax increase, using a decrease in the unemployment rate to trigger a decrease in the income tax is a creative solution to this problem.

"This new round of deferrals now makes quick action on the tax proposal by the Michigan Senate absolutely imperative. We are running out of time.

Safety patrollers joining food drive

Safety patrollers at 28 metropolitan area schools will collect food donated by their classmates for "Operation: Food Basket," an Automobile Club of Michigan program developed in response to the state's record unemployment levels.

"By involving safety patrollers in 'Operation: Food Basket,' we are broadening the scope of their school and community service and expanding the number of collection points for food," said Robert Cullen, Auto Club's safety and traffic engineering manager.

More than 800 safety patrollers will ask for donations March 21-25 from fellow students at public and parochial schools. Collection points are Greenfield School in Birmingham, Larkshire in Farmington, Jane Addams in Redford Township, Hull in Livonia and St. Damien in Westland.

FOOD COLLECTED in the tri-county area will be distributed to families through the Detroit Neighborhood Services Department, the Wayne Metro Community Services Agency, the Macomb County Department of Social Services, and the Agency Council for County Emergency Services in Oakland County.

Donations also may be made at 500 Operation: Food Basket collection sites, including the Auto Club's offices and claim centers.

Western Wayne County sites are in Livonia, Plymouth, Wayne-Westland and the west side of Detroit.

Oakland County offices are in Birmingham, Farmington, Lathrup Village, Southfield and Troy-Rochester.

As of March 1, more than 101,000 pounds of food have been collected at Auto Club offices.

COOK UP SOME MAGIC

...with the Younger Set

Like the mischievous white rabbit who led Alice into Wonderland, parents can lead their children into the magical world of cooking. Given half a chance, boys and girls from toddlerhood on will make marvelous messes. Most youngsters can't wait to get their hands in the flour.

Teaching kids to cook not only provides the fun and satisfaction of putting things together, but also answers a very real need for working moms who need help in the kitchen. Children ranging from eight or nine (if already kitchen-handy) to fourteen are at the ideal age to share some responsibility for dinner.

The key to raising your own chef de cuisine is to involve the younger set early, at three or four years of age, in simple tasks which meld with their relatively short attention spans.

To keep up the enthusiasm, try a variety of dishes that can be associated with familiar and favorite stories like the fanciful Alice in Wonderland tea party.

The presentation of these treats is delightfully childlike. And the story can be woven into the cooking lesson and used as a diversion if you sense the young chef is becoming frustrated with a certain project.

No doubt Heritage Shortcake and Sesame Cookies would have been included in the Wonderful tea party had the Mad Hatter and the March Hare known how these treats excited young children like Alice.

Leave the magic of the Heritage Shortcake to your young chef by guiding him or her in filling and topping the shortcake with the fruit and marshmallow creme mixture.

Meanwhile, the Sesame Cookies provide the opportunity for the novice to shape dough into balls, roll them in sesame seeds, and place them on the cookie sheet as Mom and Dad fills the cookie centers with preserves.

Cakes are what made Alice grow very, very tall in Wonderland. That can be the topic as you prepare the Angel Mallow frosting for the Cupcakes With Petite Daisies. Explain to your child the magic of watching the beaten egg whites form soft peaks. Frost the cupcakes together.

Lastly, to appease the Queen of Hearts, try the Finale Fruit Tarts. Once the shells and filling have been prepared, invite your young chef to assist in filling the tarts and garnish with strawberries and bananas.

The Moral of the Story for success with your growing chefs is: maintain flexibility. Specifically,

- Don't overwhelm them with long lists of rules.
- Know in advance that when youngsters help cook, total cleanliness is next to impossible and that the final clean-up chores may well be yours alone.
- Avoid the temptation to take over and do everything yourself.
- And, above all: Always enthusiastically eat what your young chefs help cook!!

Plain old ham stars in party-special entree

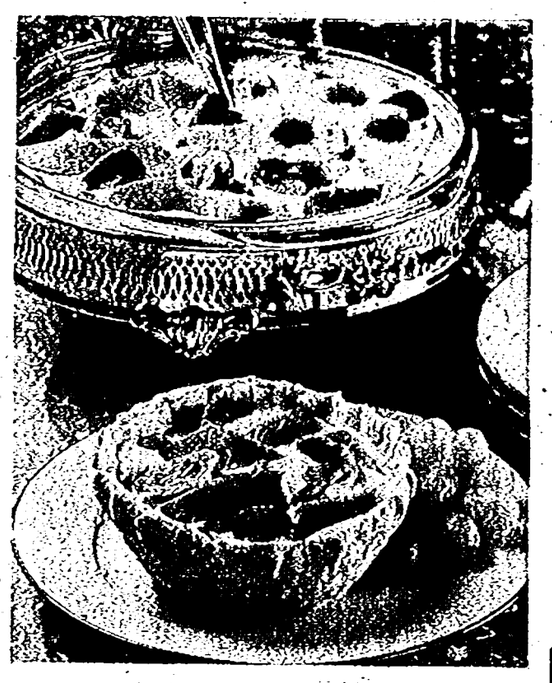
Fortunately, elegant entertaining doesn't have to take a lot of time or money. Ham and Artichokes Deluxe is a delicious example of a company-special entree that's compatible with the budgets and hectic time schedules of today's hostesses.

HAM AND ARTICHOKES DELUXE
¾ to 1 lb. cooked smoked ham, sliced ½ inch thick
Pastry Shells*
2 cups (8 oz.) mushrooms, halved
½ cup sliced green onions
2 tbsp. butter
¼ cup flour
2 cups milk
½ cup shredded Gruyere cheese
1 pkg. (9 oz.) frozen artichokes hearts, defrosted

Prepare Pastry Shells. Cut ham into strips ¾-inch wide. Cook mushrooms and onions in butter in large skillet 2 to 3 minutes; stir in flour. Gradually stir in milk and cook slowly until thickened, stirring occasionally. Add Gruyere cheese and continue cooking, stirring constantly, until cheese is melted. Stir in ham strips and artichoke hearts; continue cooking until heated through. Spoon into Pastry Shells. 4 servings.

*PASTRY SHELLS
½ of a 17¼-oz. pkg. frozen puff pastry sheets (1 sheet)

Thaw puff pastry 20 minutes; unfold. On lightly floured board, roll out sheet to 13 x 13-inch square. Cut out 4 circles, 6 inches in diameter. Shape pastry rounds over four 10-ounce inverted custard cups, making pleats so pastry will fit closely. Prick thoroughly with fork to prevent puffing. Place inverted custard cups on baking sheet. Bake in hot oven (400°) 12 to 15 minutes or until brown. Carefully remove shells from cups. Cool on rack. Yield: 4 pastry shells.



Plain old ham becomes an elegrant entree when combined with artichokes and served in an easily prepared puff pastry.

Variations on a French-toast theme

When I was a youngster I made French toast many a Sunday. It was simple: white bread dipped in a mixture of egg and milk, then fried in butter.

That was when I enjoyed eating more than cooking. Times have changed. Today I find more satisfaction in preparing a dish enjoyed by others.

If there ever was an original French toast, it probably was born in New Orleans. Pain perdu (lost bread) is economical as well as elegant. It's a tasty way to dispose of French bread left over from dinner.

The batter can be spiked with brandy, but a little vanilla extract will suffice. Shortening and bacon drippings replace butter. But I used the drippings from link sausage I prepared one morning to go with the French toast, then melted the shortening in the already hot skillet. I humbly accepted the sitting applause.

I tried a Puerto Rican recipe that received rave notices at the breakfast table, too.

The batter is composed of egg and orange juice. Instead of using vanilla, I crushed about 30 vanilla wafers and dredged the batter-coated bread in them. I used raisin bread and added a little margarine to the skillet each time I fried a batch.

French taost, whether it's made the New Orleans style or the Puerto Rican way, is a mouth-watering treat.

NEW ORLEANS FRENCH TOAST
2 eggs
½ cup milk
¼ tsp vanilla
2 tbsp sugar
⅛ tsp salt
6 slices day-or-two-old French bread, 1-inch thick
1 tbsp link sausage or bacon drippings
2 tbsp shortening

Slightly beat eggs in soup bowl, gradually add milk, then vanilla, sugar and salt and beat to combine. Soak bread on both sides in egg mixture. Heat drippings and let shortening melt in large non-stick skillet and fry bread on both sides on medium heat until golden brown. Sprinkle on confectioners sugar and serve with syrup or honey. Serves 3.

PUERTO RICAN ORANGE FRENCH TOAST
2 eggs
1 cup orange juice
1½ cups finely crushed vanilla wafers
10 slices raisin bread
Margarine

Slightly beat eggs in soup bowl, gradually add orange juice and beat to combine. Place crushed wafers in another soup bowl. Dip bread on both sides in egg mixture, then dredge in wafers. Melt 1 tablespoon margarine in large non-stick skillet and fry bread on both sides on medium heat until golden brown. Use 1 tablespoon margarine each time bread is added to skillet. Serve with syrup. Serves 5.

'Seasonal' approach clues in fashion hues

looking good

By Marie McGee
staff writer

ROSE-COLORED glasses aren't on the approved list for Joyce Clark.

She's a snow-white "winter." Rose is a "summer's" color.

And if you're a color consultant, you pay attention to little details like that.

Actually, Clark, a former Livonia resident, doesn't wear glasses at all. The reference is a figurative one — she's looking at the world through rose-colored these days because of the success she's had as a consultant for a firm called Color Me Beautiful Inc., based on a book by founder Carole Jackson.

Jackson's book is credited with starting the color revolution which has swept the country after first being introduced by California's Fashion Academy.

Jackson's technique classifies women (and men, too) in one of the four seasons according to their coloring, based on skin tones, eyes and hair color.

ONCE CLASSIFIED, the person uses the information as a guide in selecting clothes by using a palette of colors especially selected for that "season." Sometimes the palettes are made up of specially developed color chips, but most of the time it contains swatches of materials in colors most flattering to each season.

Clark is one of six Color Me Beautiful consultants in the state. There is considerable competition, she reports.

She now resides in Midland with her golf-pro husband, Jim, and their three sons, 15, 13 and 8. She came back to visit friends in Livonia as part of an assignment at the recent three-day Strategies convention in Detroit that drew about 7,000 women plus several thousand high school students.

Color Me Beautiful had an exhibit at the convention.

She'll be returning to the area next month when she will be conducting seminars at nine area J.C. Penney stores, including one at the Westland store on April 23. She'll also be holding color-awareness workshops for store personnel.

RETAIL PEOPLE who buy have to be educated about color too, she said.

Actually, Clark had a a head start on her career as a color consultant. Right after graduation from Franklin High School in 1964, she began modeling on a free-lance basis, soon moving on to full-time assignments.

"My friends will remember me as Jo Lening," she said.

After her several years of marriage, she opened a dress shop in Midland, which she has operated for about 10 years. She has also been involved with the Miss Michigan and Miss America pageants.

She's also the author of "The Guide to Seasonal Buying" and "Guide to Seasonal Sales Techniques." Both originated, she said, to bridge the gap between the color and fashion industries and came about before she joined Color Me Beautiful last year.

She's also formed her own separate consulting firm and travels thoughout the country, lecturing to manufacturers and retailers on the seasonal approach.

Competition in the color field is growing, she said. But she feels Jackson's approach is the best.

"AND DON'T THINK that just anyone can do it," she said. Before she was accepted for the Color Me Beautiful program, she had to write an essay on color, take a color test and write an autobiography. After she was selected, a 10-day training period followed. Periodic conventions keep consultants updated, she added.

Her advice to anyone interested in a color analysis is "ask for credentials" before spending the $30-$50 fee that many consultants charge.

Right now things are looking rosy in another direction for the striking, dark-haired, blue-eyed former model.

Attorney V. Paul Donnelly spoke about age discrimination at the recent Strategies conference. Ruth Marcus of the Older Woman's League, who addressed the same topic, takes notes.

Strategy speakers say

Women should fight age discrimination

By Sherry Kahan
staff writer

The Detroit law firm of V. Paul Donnelly is suing more than 300 U.S. corporations about the rights of employees. The majority of the cases involve age discrimination.

"Age discrimination is bad enough," Donnelly told women at the recent Strategies conference in Cobo Hall. "But with sex discrimination, it can be twice as bad for them.

"If women between 45 and 65 decided to do something with the age-employment issue, they could change the country. Age would be the biggest issue in the next election."

Speaking with Donnelly was Ruth Marcus, a member of the national board of the Older Woman's League (OWL). She informed her audience that when someone tells her she doesn't look 60, she tells them, "This is how 60 looks."

She said she picked up this approach from Gloria Steinem who adopted it after turning 40.

DONNELLY WHO has been interviewed on TV by Mike Wallace and Good Morning America, will speak on the Phil Donahue program in the near future about age discrimination. He will recommend strongly that there be a national law stating that people cannot be fired without just cause.

In an interview he said that these cases can be costly to a corporation.

"The average case is worth about $100,000 to a client," he said. He explained that is because a person fired because of age is no longer marketable as far as a job is concerned.

"Lost wages add up," he said.

"You are old at 45 today," said Donnelly whose clients are salaried workers who have no union to go to bat for them. "That's a fact of life. If you make over $30,000, you are unmarketable."

He noted that corporations would prefer that age discrimination cases be tried by a judge, but he prefers a jury.

"We have found if we allow a decision to be made by a judge only, we get involved with the prejudices of the judge," he said. "And judges are subject to a lot of political pressure. A jury of your peers is going to be fair."

'I get angry at how isolated parents feel when we talk to them. They've never had a chance to talk to each other as women often do on the park bench. Since they haven't talked to others, they think that all their problems with their children are because they work.'

flexible benefits encouraging

Flexible benefits are a help

By Sherry Kahan
staff writer

Flexible benefits. This is one of the more creative concepts currently offered by employers to help two career families. The idea was examined by Phyllis Silverman in a talk she gave at the three-day Strategies conference which drew more than 7,000 women to Cobo Hall.

It is being adopted by a few corporations which are beginning to recognize that employees with children have special problems, particularly child care.

When benefits are flexible, members of a two-job family are able to tailor their benefits more closely to their lifestyle.

"The full medical, disability and insurance package might not be needed in their 20s," said Silverman who is manager of Corporate Child Care Resource, Catalyst, in New York City. "Some of their dollars could be used for something else like a special fund or child care.

THE AMERICAN CAN Co. in Connecticut has a core group of benefits for all," reported the speaker. Employees can take some of the extra benefit dollars for child care.

The reason many companies give for not solving care problems through a child care center on site is their concern "about offering a major benefit to only part of the workers."

Sometimes a care facility for children can be of great value to an employer. Silverman spoke of such a center established at Intermedics, of Freeport, Tex.

"The company was competing with Dow Chemical for employees," she said. "So it started the largest child care center in the country. They no longer have any problems about recruiting workers."

Silverman noted that more than 500 employers in the U.S. offer child care. "But half of them are hospitals used to supplying services."

SHE WOULD like to see companies promote various other aides to parents such as lunchtime seminars, or guides to the best child care in the area.

"I get angry at how isolated parents feel when we talk to them," she said. "They've never had a chance to talk to each other as women often do on the park bench. Since they haven't talked to others, they think that all their problems with their children are because they work."

A child-care guide would have been helpful to a distraught employee who wrote to the company that she had just spent three weeks looking for a child-care provider, "and she just quit."

She added: "This is a real problem for me, and I think it is for others."

Join 5,000 other demonstrators

Residents march for nuclear freeze

By Sherry Kahan
staff writer

"I'm a businessman and I have 11 kids and one grandchild," said Richard McHugh of Westland after returning home from the nuclear freeze demonstration in Washington, D.C.

"I'm concerned that if this game is not stopped, there won't be any other. I felt that if there was any time for me to stand up and be counted, the nuclear freeze issue is it."

These were the thoughts that led McHugh and his wife Nancy to board a bus in Ferndale recently and ride all night to the nation's capital. There he joined about 5,000 other demonstrators, all seeking an agreement between the U.S. and Russia to end the manufacture and use of new nuclear weapons.

Joining the McHughs were Michael Gramlich, also of Westland; Gwen Foss and Cynthia Hirami and her 16-year-old daughter, Ann-Nora of Livonia; Mary Riley of Redford; and Gloria Pappas and Johanne Fechter of Plymouth. Fechter is coordinator of the Western Wayne Region of the Detroit Area Nuclear Weapons Freeze Campaign.

MCHUGH REPORTED that he, the Hirami and other freeze advocates spent an hour with U.S. Rep. William Ford, D-Westland, who said he supported their position.

"I feel very strongly we have a serious situation," said Cynthia Hirami. Every individual has to take a stand. We don't have time to sit back and let others make decisions."

Senators Edward Kennedy and Alan Cranston addressed the freeze group. Riley said she believed the gatheringtion had an impact on the lawmakers.

"We demonstrated we are most serious about the freeze," she said. "We showed it to the public and to Congress."

The demonstration also had an impact on those who participated.

"Those of us in the nuclear freeze movement were affirmed," Riley said. "It was very meaningful."

A woman marching next to Riley expressed Riley's emotions when she said, "I could cry."

Flex benefits can help 2-career families

UNFAIR, in the opinion of the speaker are certain performance tests given to employees. While this related only indirectly to age problems, Donnelly said it is a way to discriminate against females.

"One method of discrimination is to give a low evaluation," he claimed. "This is common."

He added that some employers maintain a list of people to be advanced.

"To get on the list you have to get a five," he said. "In the past they have not given women a five."

Donnelly is displeased with the attitude of the federal government about age discrimination. The government is not informing people how to sue corporations on this issue.

"If people knew they had rights," he said, "they wouldn't be fired as often. They would sue, and corporations would learn the costs would be high to them."

"WE'VE GOT TO FIGHT age discrimination as women," declared Marcus, who is a trustee of Muskegon Community College. "As members of an aging society, we cannot let our culture push us aside. I want you to remember that. If we don't advocate for ourselves, no one else will do it. Every day in the U.S. 5,000 men and women turn 65.

She offered her listeners some advice about aging.

- Accept yourself at the age you are. Don't let anyone put you down. Be proud. We equate youth with health and activity. But a lot of older people are healthy, active and involved.
- Do an evaluation of yourself, especially if in the work force. Don't put off looking at yourself and where you are going. Have a 30-year plan.
- Plan for your future, with emphasis on the word, your. It can be with or without him. "With the divorce rate women have to be independent," she said. "They are one man away from welfare."
- Develop resources that count — money, health and friends. Look at your retirement income.
- Develop alliances that count. Be part of a group that keeps in touch with the community. "Join the Business and Professional Women's Club, the League of Women Voters or the American Association of University Women," she advised, adding "OWL costs only $5 a year."

She favors a national health program. "The average age of widowhood is 56," she said. "Who will take care of your medical bills until you are 65?"

Change shows wavering self-esteem

graphology

Lorene Green

Dear Mrs. Green:

I am a 27-year-old female and right-handed. What I have noticed most about my handwriting is that it seems to change at different points in my life. I can almost see changes as I feel myself becoming more or less confident, etc. Is this common? One thing that has always remained the same is my slant: it has always been straight up or slightly slanted to the left. The other day my hand went back to the former way. It surprised me. and I wondered what it meant.

L.G. Westland

(f) for a few years. Before that, this: (f). The other day, my ha former way - it surprised me, an it meant.

Dear L.G.,

It is not uncommon to find changes in a person's handwriting, especially a young person. Definite changes will manifest themselves as a person's self-esteem develops or wavers. I find it most interesting that your slant never changes as a slant is one thing that frequently changes in many peoples handwriting. It is directly tied to one's emotional reactions. Incidentally, the lower case F such as you formerly made suggests easy flow of words. If all the F's are shaped this way in a writing sample, it is quite probably the silver-tongued conversationalist.

The total picture of your legible handwriting suggests that you were raised in a mother-dominated home. This does not infer that your mother was a domineering person. The role may have been foisted upon her for a number of reasons: i.e., a father who worked long hours, separation, or lack of a strong male image. At any rate she was probably the one who ran the home.

Outwardly you appear poised and calm. You do not show any emotions freely. Neither do you rush into a situation impulsively. Usually you take time to consider how a matter will affect you personally before becoming involved.

You can be quite an independent young women. You want to make your own decisions and stand on your own two feet. There appears to be some conflict here because early life experiences still seem to have strong influence over you.

On the day you wrote this letter to me you were feeling both optimistic and ambitious (upslanted lines and signature). Persistence (found in those looped T crossings) would be an asset in accomplishing goals. Speaking of goals some of yours are not challenging. It seems that you often do only the things in which you feel comfortable and secure. Security is highly important to you.

Area groups rally for nuclear freeze

Fechter noted that participants attended workshops in several Washington churches. At one workshop, she reported, former CIA director William Colby said it was possible to verify a freeze because the U.S. has long been monitoring Soviet weaponry.

PAUL WARNEKE, former chief negotiator for SALT II, said it was possible to negotiate because the U.S. has already negotiated agreements with Russia which both sides have kept.

Marion Anderson, director of Employment Research Associates of Michigan, said money put into weapons produces fewer jobs than the same amount of money spent in the civilian sector.

McHugh summed up the feelings of many of the demonstrators when he said: "We don't care who is ahead in the nuclear arms race. We just want everyone to stop."

Margot Kidder immerses herself in high crime and intrigue as a would-be mystery writer in "Trenchcoat," a Jerry Leider production. Robert Hays co-stars in the mystery-comedy shot on the Mediterranean island of Malta.

the movies
Louise Snider

This movie makes a case for scripts with good material

An unstable mix of mystery and comedy that is too thin to jell, "Trenchcoat" (PG) stars Margot Kidder and Robert Hays as two Americans playing detective on the island of Malta.

The movie is like a duck-billed platypus, a little bit of this and a little bit of that — a private-eye spoof, some slapstick comedy, a dab of romantic adventure. It also boasts the mandatory car chases and semi-bumbling police. All these strands are brought together in a ragged assemblage that has a very amateurish look to it.

Kidder is a court stenographer who wants to be a mystery writer. She goes to Malta for a two-week vacation in search of material for her novel. She doesn't have to search long. Her first day of sightseeing, she blunders into a murder.

Kidder would like to solve the crime through her own investigations. Unfortunately, "Trenchcoat" doesn't present the kind of mystery calling for the services of a sharp-minded detective. The emphasis is on Kidder's confrontations and narrow escapes, not on problem-solving.

BY MAKING A CACHE of plutonium the prize everyone is after, the script need not bother about logic. It can, and does, simply introduce a number of people of different nationalities and races who are all after the plutonium.

Kidder is at the nuclear center of their activity because she unknowingly possesses the clue to the plutonium's location. Thus we have various people following her, attacking her and kidnapping her. Everyone is after her, it seems, except the police, who think she is a crazy, sensation-seeking tourist.

The only person she can turn to for help is another American, Robert Hays, whom she met on the flight to Malta. At least, he believes her, and she can count on him. Or can she? Is he after the plutonium too?

"Trenchcoat," in spite of a couple of murders, is a lightweight film. Its assets are a scenically interesting location, Robert Hays' easygoing charm, Margot Kidder's throaty, sexy voice and a sturdy supporting cast playing various kinds of wacky people.

John Justin is quite funny as the stuffy manager of the quiet, conservative hotel where Kidder keeps disturbing the peace. Daniel Faraldo is Nino, a lusty Italian who is after Kidder for more than sex. Gila Von Weitershausen is a suspicious-acting German; David Suchet is the muddled police inspector; and Pauline Delaney and P.G. Stephens are a smiling Irish couple who give the young lovers encouragement.

ON THE NEGATIVE side, the movie lacks momentum, jumps about erratically and doesn't build to a climax. Even worse is its patronizing attitude toward the heroine. Although Kidder's character may be intrepid in looking for clues, when it comes to following someone, she hops in the car, then confesses she doesn't know how to drive a stick shift. She may be gutsy, but she is also naive, and it takes a man to rescue her.

Kidder and Hays are both fine actors with a real flair for comedy. They deserve better material, something more sophisticated, less Disneyish.

Chinese painting exhibited

Kou-Nien Chang, a native of Kiangsu Province, will conduct an exhibition on Chinese painting at 2 p.m. Saturday in the Liberal Arts Building at Schoolcraft College, 18600 Haggerty, Livonia.

Co-sponsored by the Chinese Cultural League and the college, admission is free.

Chang, a professor, first came to America at the invitation of St. John's University in New York to give a series of lectures and exhibit his paintings. He has returned often to display his work, exhibiting at the New York World's Fair in 1964-65 and Expo '67 in Canada.

His paintings have also been shown in Italy, Belgium and Japan.

After moving to Taiwan, Chang was awarded a literature prize by the Ministry of Education and a gold medal by the Chinese Fine Arts Association.

His large painting, depicting the scenery of the East-West Highway during the four seasons, is 8-by-48 feet. It was first shown in the gallery of the National Historical Museum and then at St. John's University and the University of Michigan. It took Chang a full year to sketch and design it.

This is the first of four monthly offerings on Chinese culture to be presented at the college. Phone the college at 591-6400, ext. 218, for more information.

Shamrocks power past Stevenson for title

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

If Domination was the subject, Mike Maleske was the teacher.

The powerful 6-foot-6 senior center patrolled the boards as if he owned them Friday to lead Redford Catholic Central to a 62-47 regional final victory over Livonia Stevenson in a packed Livonia Franklin gymnasium.

The win sends the Shamrocks into the state quarterfinals against Detroit Kettering. That game is 5 p.m. Wednesday at Detroit's Calihan Hall. It won't be the first time CC (now 21-3) has visited Calihan — a month ago the Shamrocks claimed the Catholic League title there.

Speaking of claims, against Stevenson Friday it looked as if Maleske staked a claim underneath the boards and wasn't going to allow any trespassing. He finished the game with 24 points and 22 rebounds — one board less than the entire Stevenson team.

"I BELIEVE IT," said CC coach Bernie Holowicki of Maleske's rebounding. "Stevenson came out very emotional and worked for good baskets early.

"But the backboard play took its toll later on."

The game's early moments clearly belonged to Stevenson. Tom Domako, a 6-7 junior forward, canned three jumpers and senior guard Gary Mexicotte sped through the CC defense for a pair of breakaway layups to boost the Spartans to a 14-8 lead with 2:34 left in the opening quarter.

But CC rallied. Aided by a pair of Stevenson turnovers, the Shamrocks tied it by quarter's end on baskets by Maleske, Stan Heath and Tom Malone.

CC took the lead for good with an eight-point surge midway through the second quarter, Maleske scoring four of those. It was 28-20 at the half, and Stevenson never got closer than five the rest of the game.

"We played better than the score indicated," said Stevenson coach George Van Wagoner, whose team finished at 21-4. "We began to get into a perimeter shooting game. I didn't want to do that.

"Boy, that Maleske's a strong kid. That's one area we have to correct.— our board strength."

STEVENSON'S DEFENSIVE philosophy was to stop CC's sharpshooting sophomore guard, John McIntyre. The Spartans ran a four-man box zone defense, with one player, usually Curt Ullstrom, covering McIntyre one-on-one.

The strategy worked early — until Maleske started crashing the boards. That allowed CC's running game to get into gear and score some easy baskets on the fast break.

The Spartans made their best run at CC in the middle of the third quarter. Domako and Mexicotte spurred the comeback, each scoring a pair of buckets in an 8-2 Stevenson spurt that narrowed the gap to 37-32.

But McIntyre looped in a long jumper and, after a Domako free throw, Maleske hit from inside to restore CC's eight-point cushion. Pete Rose's basket pulled Stevenson back to within six, but Stan Heath forced a pair of turnovers and converted them into baskets as CC held an eight-point lead.

The Shamrocks broke the game open with a 9-0 surge in the fourth quarter, with Maleske powering inside for five points and McIntyre hitting outside for four. Three straight Stevenson turnovers helped the CC rally.

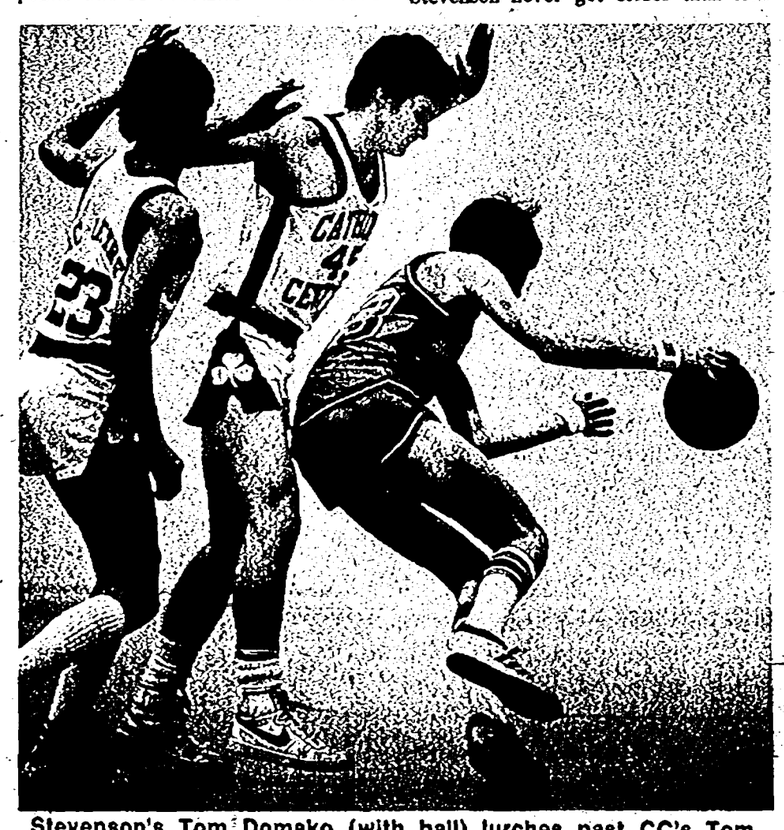
AND FREE THROW shooting killed any Stevenson hopes. The Spartans were a dismal three of 15 from the line. CC wasn't much better, making just six of 13.

Joining Maleske in double figures in the scoring column for the Shamrocks was Heath with 15 (nine in the third quarter) and McIntyre with 12. Heath also had four steals.

Domako's 17 points topped Stevenson. Mexicotte ended with 10, and Rose contributed eight. Bob Sluka was Stevenson's high rebounder with eight. Domako had six. CC enjoyed a 39-23 edge on the boards.

"If we were right, we could have beat them," Van Wagoner said after the loss.

This night, inside power was right, and that belonged to Maleske and CC.



Stevenson's Tom Domako (with ball) lurches past CC's Tom Malone and John McIntyre (23). Domako paced the Spartans with 17 points.

Trio of state champions lead area mat squad

By C.J. Risak

staff writers

A championship team and three state champions headline the 1982-83 All-Observer wrestling team.

Redford Catholic Central, coached by Mike Rodriguez, grabbed its sixth Class A title two weeks ago in Lansing as Jeff Alcala and Matt Raedle ruled their respective weight divisions.

As a team, CC also captured numerous invitational titles in addition to the Catholic League and district crowns.

Two other CC wrestlers join Alcala and Raedle on this year's first team. The Shamrocks also landed six grapplers on the second team.

Plymouth Salem, a 10th-place state finisher, put three wrestlers on the first team including two-time state champ John Beaudoin. The Western Lakes champs had one other team member on the second team.

Westland John Glenn, Northwest Suburban League champs (NSL), placed two on the first team and one on the second.

Four other schools also are represented.

Here are the best wrestlers by weight class as selected recently by area coaches:

FIRST TEAM

Kevin Richardson, Garden City, heavyweight. A two-time state qualifier, Richardson reached the finals in his division before losing.

He compiled a 44-7 record as a senior and was first in four invitational tournaments, first in the NSL and second at the regional.

Richardson recorded 30 falls, 21 coming in the first period while going undefeated in dual meets.

Rick Vershave, Plymouth Salem, 98 pounds. The Salem junior won 31 matches and pinned 11 opponents.

He was most impressive in tournaments, winning the Western-Lakes, placing second in the district and gaining fourth in the regional.

Vershave was fourth or better in 10 tourneys.

Tom Gibson, Westland John Glenn, 105. Gibson closed out his career with 99 wins after going 34-7-1 this season.

A two-year state qualifier, Gibson won two invitationals, captured the NSL title, grabbed second in the tough Temperance-Bedford District and placed third at the regional.

This is Gibson's second All-Area honor of the year. He was a standout in cross country.

Mike Palajac, Redford Catholic Central, 112. The senior co-captain was a heavy contributor to CC's state title run.

Salem stumbles, falls in regional

basketball

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

An equation for success on a basketball court: Force your opponent to make mistakes.

Then capitalize on them.

Plymouth Salem got the first part right. The Rocks forced Detroit Western to commit 25 miscues in their first-round state regional tournament game Thursday at Eastern Michigan University. But Salem failed to take advantage of enough of those opportunities.

Summation: A 53-49 Western victory.

The season-ending loss left the Rocks with a sparkling 21-3 mark. Western was 16-6 going into Saturday's regional final against Antoine Joubert and Detroit Southwestern.

After falling behind early, Salem stormed back to within four at the start of the fourth quarter but never overtook the Cowboys. And, ultimately, the Rocks' inability to cash in on several scoring opportunities in that last quarter cost them the victory.

IT WAS A GUTTY final-game performance for Salem. Playing away from home for the first time in eight games, the Rocks came out tight, and, as coach Fred Thomann admitted, it took them awhile to adjust defensively.

The Cowboys scored six points before Salem got a shot at the basket and led, 18-10, after one quarter.

A blowout was clearly a possibility after Western outpointed the Rocks, 9-3, in the first 3½ minutes of the second quarter to take a 14-point advantage. But Salem bolted back with a 12-1 rush before the half and trailed by just three, 28-25, at the intermission.

It was at that point that it appeared Salem would take control of the game. But it never happened.

"OUR KIDS ARE battlers," Thomann said of the second-quarter comeback. "They don't know how to pack it up.

"Two years in a row we got to that game (regional opener) and were in a situation where a team could blow us out. But we made it close. That says a lot for our kids and the way they deal with adversity.

"It would be fantastic if we could win that game, but we didn't."

What momentum Salem gained with its second-quarter flurry was lost in the first four minutes of the third. The Rocks didn't score a point until John Cohen's basket with 3:40 left in the period.

Still, they trailed by just 37-33 entering the fourth quarter. What Thomann called "a coaching mistake — it was my fault" cost the Rocks a basket in the early moments, as Western's Richard Hunter grabbed the ball off the tip and layed it in for a 39-33 Cowboy lead.

"SOMEONE IS supposed to guard against that," Thomann said. "But I didn't designate who to do it. It was my fault."

But Salem opportunities came. Western scored its last field goal of the game with 6:05 remaining. The rest of its points came at the free-throw line.

On three straight possessions, the Cowboys turned the ball over. Salem scored nary a point.

Matt Broderick pilfered two passes but missed short jumpers. Dave Houle picked off another pass but had his layup blocked. Erich Hartnett nabbed an offensive rebound; later he made a clean steal. Both times he allowed the ball to dribble off his hands and out of bounds.

All isolated instances, but together they proved catastrophic.

JOHN COHEN turned in another superlative effort off the Salem bench. The 6-foot-4 senior poured in 19 points, hitting eight of 12 chances from the floor.

But Salem did not shoot consistently — next highest scorers were Marvin Zurek and Houle with eight apiece. The Rocks were 22 of 51 for the game (43 percent), including a dismal 10 of 26 in the second half (38.5 percent).

Western built its first-half lead behind a hot-shooting performance from the floor. The Cowboys were 13 of 19 in the first two quarters (68.4 percent) before cooling off in the second half, hitting six of 17 (35.3 percent).

Robert Johnson's 15 points and eight rebounds topped Western. Hunter had 13 points, four assists and five steals and Eric Johnson netted 11 points.

Broderick and Rick Berberet led the Salem rebounders with six apiece, as Western held a slim 32-31 advantage on the boards.

"I thought our effort was really good," Thomann said. "If we had dealt with the beginning of the game better, adjusted a little quicker, it might have been different.

"But our growth as a team this year was phenomenal. We couldn't have played in that game in January."

Improve the Rocks did through the last half of the season, but at the end, it wasn't quite enough.

He accumulated a 40-12 record en route to a third-place finish in Class A.

Palajac's only loss in the state tourney was to Birmingham Brother Rice's Todd Snooks, but he avenged that defeat in the consolation final, 9-5.

The Shamrock standout qualified two straight years for state competition.

Abe Yaffai, Livonia Bentley, 119. One of three brothers who helped Bentley enjoy its best season ever, Yaffai came on strong at the close of the year, qualifying for the state meet.

He was 20-13 and placed fourth or better at the Western Lakes, district and regional tournaments.

Tim Collins, Plymouth Canton, 126. A junior, Collins won the Plymouth Salem and Garden City invitationals and also qualified for the state meet.

Collins carved a 36-12 record and placed in every tournament he entered, including a third in the Western Lakes meet.

He is currently fifth on Canton's total point list and has 76 varsity wins.

Jeff Sobczynski, Redford Catholic Central, 132. The Shamrock senior ended the year with a reputable 34-12 record.

Sobczynski placed first in the Catholic League meet, fourth in the district and third in a Kentucky tournament.

John Beaudoin, Plymouth Salem, 138. The Salem All-Stater never lost a match his senior year while setting seven school records.

His 49 wins were highlighted by 31 pins. He scored 333½ points.

Beaudoin's career record was 106-9. He is a two-time district, regional and state champ. The Salem team captain will represent Michigan in an all-star meet next month against Ohio.

Beaudoin will probably end up wrestling for a Big Ten school next year.

Robb Paciocco, Westland John Glenn, 145. The Glenn senior made a strong showing at the state meet as he finished third after placing second in both the regional and district.

Paciocco's career record is 107-22. He posted a 47-6 slate this year.

Among his other accomplishments were: NSL champion, Plymouth Salem champion and second in both the Glenn and Rocket invitationals.

Jeff Alcala, Redford Catholic Central, 155. Fifth in his weight class a year ago, this All-Observer repeater capped his senior year with a state title.

He wrestled in a tough weight class, but still won 36 of 39 matches. One of his losses was to John Glenn's outstanding senior Don Forchione in the regional final.

Alcala is leaning toward a wrestling career at Michigan State.

Tim Templeton, Livonia Stevenson, 167. The Spartan captain sported a 28-8 record, including 19 pins, as a senior.

Templeton holds school records for career wins, career pins, career team points, pins in a season and points scored in a season.

He was first in the Livonia City Meet and Dearborn Heights Robichaud tourney. Templeton was also second in the Western Lakes, Schoolcraft Invitational and John Glenn tournament.

The Stevenson MVP was fourth in the district.

Matt Raedle, Redford Catholic Central, 185. Raedle, bound for Notre Dame on a wrestling scholarship, won 56 of 57 matches en route to the state crown.

He never lost in tournament competition this season.

Raedle also scored 38 pins and 370 team points, both school records.

The CC co-captain was a state qualifier last season.

Harry Walkley, Plymouth Salem, 198. A sixth place finisher in Class A, the Rocks' team captain concluded his senior year with a 42-7 record.

Walkley set a pair of school records: most pins in a season (32) and consecutive pins (12). He also scored 300 points.

He enjoyed seven first-place tournament finishes. The Salem standout was first in the Western Lakes, second in the district and third in the regional.

in the pocket
by W.W. Edgar

Being a creature of habit The Stroller can't resist the temptation to turn to the sports pages each day and keep up on the news from the major league baseball camps. And each morning he is disappointed that there is no mention of any "daffiness" boys.

Surely, times haven't changed that much that there are no rookies in camp who mix a lot of fun and laugh-provoking antics with their ambition to earn a place on the team.

Being a veteran alumnus of the spring camps, The Stroller just can't believe that there are no successors to the memorable Dizzy and Daffy Dean, of the old St. Louis Cardinals, and Paul "Dizzy" Trout of the Tigers.

As he reads up and down the columns of his paper, the memory of Dizzy Trout and his debut with the Tigers comes floating back through the years.

It so happened that Trout made his first appearance in the Tiger camp in 1937, the year following Manager Mickey Cochrane's misfortune of being hit by a pitched ball in Yankee Stadium — a blow that made him a bench manager later in his career.

Cochrane wasn't on hand in the lobby when Trout made his first appearance, and The Stroller was the only one to greet him.

Finally, Mickey entered the scene, and The Stroller introduced him to his latest pitching candidate.

As they shook hands Trout looked Cochrane in the eye and said, "your pitching problems are over. I'll take care of that."

Mickey just stared. Nothing like that ever had happened to him before. With that moment Trout took charge, and in an hour or so everyone knew he was in town.

When he repeorted for his first workout Mickey asked him, "What is your best pitch?" Trout answered, "It's the old bandanna. That's what I used back in Sandcut, Ind., and I feel it will be good enough here."

With that he pulled a red handkerchief from his pocket and explained he used it like a bullfighter. "When the bull comes out I pull out my red bandanna to scare him. And it will be that way with the batters."

When Trout cut loose in the practice session the Tiger boss knew he had something on his hands with which he would have to reckon.

When the exhibition season started Dizzy tried to coax Cochrane into letting him be the starting pitcher. He didn't get the assignment. But he kept coaxing him until he was named to start the fourth game.

"I'll bet the Dodgers won't get a hit off me," he said to Cochrane and bet him a necktie. Strangely, that's what happened. He didn't allow a hit in first four turns on the mound and became the talk of the camp.

No rookie ever strutted around like Dizzy. He was going well until he faced the Cardinals at Daytona Beach on Easter Sunday. The Cards started riding him, and he became confused, despite the bandanna, and his bubble burst when he walked four men in a row.

"What's wrong?" Trout asked, "I once walked six in a row down in Sandcut, but we finally won the game.

But that was the finish of Trout for that season. He was sent down to Toledo for more traaining. But Dizzy got the last laugh.

When he returned to the majors the next season he stuck and become one of the Tiger pitching corps' mainstays.

He has gone to his rest now, but he always will be remembered along with Dizzy and Daffy Dean as one of baseball's never-to-be-forgotten "daffiness boys."

Evidently, they don't come like that any more.

Some people move to Knob in the Woods for the location. Some come for the Olympic pool and the club house (complete with steam room and showers). Some come for the security, or the fact that we pay the heating bill. Some come for the reasonable rents (one-bedroom apartments start at just $420 a month). Come and see what they've found—set in this unique in-town forest.
