Students accused of trading gun

A parent was critical of school officials not notifying parents that a gun was confiscated in Marshall Junior High School. The administration did disclose that it proposed the hiring of a security firm to protect the district's four junior highs and two senior highs.

BY DARRELL CLEM

Three Marshall Junior High students caught in an alleged handgun sale at school have been suspended and could be expelled as early as Tuesday, officials confirmed Friday.

One ninth-grader and two eighth-graders — all males — were suspended after a .22-caliber semiautomatic handgun and 24 rounds of ammunition were found in a locker at the school on Bayview, east of Wayne Road, officials said.

An expulsion hearing before the Wayne-Westland school board has been scheduled Tuesday for the three students, said Gary Dell, school district spokesman.

Officials have received no indication that either of the students threatened anyone with the gun, which had an unloaded clip. But 24 rounds of ammunition were found in a student's jacket, police reports said.

The ninth-grader brought the gun to school Thursday, March 25, Dell said. One of the eighth-graders arranged to sell the weapon to another eighth-grader, Dell and principal Larry Galbraith said.

"One student had it under his control, and another student purchased it," Galbraith said.

School officials learned of the sale through a student not involved in the transaction. That prompted school administrators to summon Westland police for an afternoon locker search.

District Superintendent Larry Thomas confirmed that separate investigations have been launched by his administration and by the Westland Police Department. Police could seek criminal charges.

Graphics arts teacher honored

James Horton's students learn the competitive, exciting and disappointing truths of running a business firsthand.

Horton shows students at the Ford Vocational/Technical Center how to set up graphic design companies to complete work for Wayne-Westland school district clubs and sports teams and for non-profit organizations in the community.

"I'm a symbol of what all teachers will have to become," Horton said. "Education is changing radically and we'll have to change radically."

His teaching method is a harbinger of tomorrow's classrooms and was recognized recently as outstanding by "Newsweek" magazine and WDIV television.

He was honored at a dinner and received $2,000.

Revamping the graphic design program began when Horton became the graphic design instructor three years ago and offered to work at businesses for free in order to learn the skills.

University classrooms, he feared, could be teaching outdated methods.

"I put in a lot of extra time reeducating myself," Horton said. "The old traditional classroom will have to change to a modern, streamlined, technical thrust where we're gearing students toward the demands of society," according to Horton, who was also named Wayne-Westland school district teacher of the year in 1992.

"The old days of doing book reports will be changed into doing a business report, applying it to real life."

Sharon and Charles Piper used to laugh at the irony of having the same last name even though they hadn't yet married. It was a twist of fate that made them smile.

"Chuck used to tell people my last name. He got a kick out of doing that," Sharon Piper said.

They had known each other for 28 years, but only fell in love in 1991. They had made plans to marry on the Fourth of July last year. They had chosen a church for their wedding and had started making a guest list.

Their dreams were cut short, however, when Charles Piper of Westland was shot to death on Jan. 5, 1992, inside Chuck's Cycle Service, a business he owned on Michigan Avenue in Wayne.

"I have adjusted myself to not having anybody again," Sharon Piper said last week after her fiance's killer, Frederick Morris of Canton Township, was sentenced to life in prison with no possibility of parole.

Morris, 34, was convicted March 9 of first-degree murder during a bench trial before Judge David Kerwin of Detroit Recorder's Court. Kerwin sentenced Morris Wednesday.

Morris, a former employee of Piper's, was accused of robbing his ex-boss of $300. Testimony also indicated Morris was angry because Piper refused to settle a lawsuit filed by Morris' girlfriend, Sharon Broughton.

Broughton sued Piper's shop after her son, 9 at the time, was burned three years ago by flames that shot from a carburetor at the motorcycle shop.

Even though Morris has been sent to prison for life, Sharon Piper still has mixed emotions.

City officials implicated in 'Cedargate'

BY LEONARD POGER
EDITOR

Westland City Hall may be experiencing a "Cedargate" political scandal involving one councilman, a former mayor and a recently retired district judge who bought wood paneling through the city's discount, a detailed police investigation concluded.

A city administrator told Westland police investigating cedar missing from the supply bought for the 1988 City Hall remodeling that some wood was delivered by two city public service department employees on city time using a city truck.

The lengthy police report raised two major issues: that some cedar was missing and that the officials used the city's discount with a local wholesaler to buy the wood for private use.

Buying the wood were councilman Kenneth Mehl, who plans to seek a new term in the fall; former mayor Charles (Trav) Griffin, defeated by Mayor Robert Thomas in the fall of 1989; and former district judge Thomas Smith who retired last May. Griffin was mayor when the City Hall renovation was started and when the wood was purchased by him, Smith and Mehl.

Scandal's fallout: Mayor considers ethics code

Mayor Robert Thomas said he is "seriously considering" an ethics code for elected officials in the wake of the "Cedargate" dispute in which a city councilman, a former mayor and a retired judge bought wood for their private uses through the city's discount.

But he stressed in an interview Friday afternoon that he is not yet proposing such a code.

Thomas said that "we must do something — maybe something modest that we can get started."

He felt that while there is no legal problem in the officials getting wood for their private use through the city's

Shooting victim took fateful 2nd job to pay debts

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER

Joseph Gross just wanted to earn some extra money when he took a part-time job delivering pizza for Domino's.

The 34-year-old Garden City man hoped that he and his wife could get ahead on some of their bills before the Detroit company he works for — Lincoln Brass Works — closes down in June.

"I wanted to pay on some charge cards, things like that," he said.

Last week, however, Gross lay in a Garden City Hospital bed after being shot in the chest March 28 by a masked gunman who tried to rob Domino's on Wayne Road, north of Ford, in Westland.

A single bullet from a semi-automatic handgun remained lodged in a vertebra, less than an inch from his spine. Doctors can't remove it.

"They're all saying that I'm lucky I wasn't paralyzed," Gross said in a telephone interview from his hospital bed.

Doctors have inserted tubes into his chest: His right lung collapsed when it was hit by the bullet.

"The tubes hurt more than the bullet," Gross said.

Gross, who began delivering pizza two months ago, said he doesn't expect to return to the part-time job, even though his chances of being shot again might be remote.

"I don't think the extra $100 is worth it," he said.

On Thursday, Gross told the Observer about the incident that occurred when he returned to Domino's from a delivery at 1:30 a.m. March 28.

He had gotten out of his car and was walking toward Domino's door when someone started coming toward him, wearing what Gross described as a pillowcase pulled over the head. Slits had been cut out so the suspect could see.

Gross ran toward the door of Domino's and another worker pushed a security buzzer to let him in. Unfortunately, the masked gunman got to the door before Gross had time to lock it.

"We struggled and then he yanked the door out of my hand," Gross said. The intruder became angry.

"The next thing I heard was a loud bang, and he said, 'Take that, you son of a bitch.' All I saw was a puff of smoke in front of my face, and then I was falling backwards," Gross said. The suspect stood within three feet of him when the shot was fired.

The intruder then walked toward the rear of Domino's, searching, Gross believes, for the manager who was crouching and hiding near the customer counter. The manager then sneaked past Gross and fled the store to telephone Westland police.

The intruder remained inside as Gross managed to stand up and walk outside, where he hid near some newspaper boxes. He began to feel his shirt become wet with blood.

Gross hid until the suspect left, then went back inside and dialed 911. Even though he was bleeding, he said, "I never felt the bullet go in me."

Gross hopes to be home from the hospital by today (Monday). His lung is expected to heal, and Gross said doctors have told him that the bullet inside him shouldn't cause any long-term problems.

Westland police are continuing to investigate the shooting. Persons with information may contact the Westland detective bureau, 721-6311.

CLARIFICATION

A story about a robbery of a Westland Domino's Pizzeria employee should have said that Paul Gross was the deliveryman who portrayed Santa Claus last December at Garden City's Douglas School. The employee who was robbed last week was Joseph Gross, Paul's brother.

Mayor to give annual address

Mayor Robert Thomas will deliver his fourth-annual "state of the city" address at 7 p.m. Wednesday at the Westland Friendship Center, 1119 N. Newburgh near Marquette. The event is open to the public.

He said the talk is scheduled for the evening to make it easier for residents to attend.

The timing of the annual address breaks with a tradition of more than 25 years in which the mayor gave the state-of-the-city talk at the Westland Chamber of Commerce membership luncheon in February.

■ The timing of the annual address breaks with tradition.

The chamber was upset with Thomas at the end of the December when the mayor said he wanted to give the annual address in mid-April when he completes his proposed budget for the upcoming fiscal year and has a better handle on city finances.

The address will be shown later this week on the city's governmental channel (8) for cable-TV subscribers.

Dell said school officials haven't confirmed where the ninth-grader got the gun — an issue that Dell said remains under investigation.

The Observer learned about the gun last week from a concerned parent who telephoned the newspaper, saying she believed the incident should be disclosed. She was critical of school officials for not informing parents about the weapon being found at school.

"It's just generally not the practice to do that," Galbraith said. The district has received advice from attorneys not to release information about such incidents, he said.

Galbraith noted that incidents involving weapons can happen "in malls, on the street, anywhere you go."

He added: "It's not uncommon to see what happens in our schools be a reflection of society."

■ 'One student had it under his control, and another student purchased it. . . . It's not uncommon to see what happens in our schools be a reflection of society.'

principal

The concern that violence is spilling over into schools has sparked widespread fears among Wayne-Westland educators and parents. Numerous weapons incidents have been reported on school grounds in recent years.

To combat the problem, Thomas confirmed that a proposal will soon be submitted to the school board to hire a private security firm, which would beef up safety both inside and outside of the district's secondary schools.

Some school board members, such as president Leonard Posey, have long sought possible solutions to violence and weapons in schools. Board members have refrained from hiring uniformed police officers to patrol schools, however.

The Thomas administration will propose hiring a security firm to help protect the district's two high schools, four junior highs, the Ford vocational-technical center, and the Cherry Hill Alternative Education Center. The guards wouldn't be stationed at elementaries.

Thomas stressed that security forces won't solve all problems involving violence and weapons. But officials hope the plan could at least reduce the problem.

choose business names, design logos, elect each other to various positions, and compete with other student businesses for contracts.

The businesses are non-profit, and money earned above the cost of producing signs, making silk-screened T-shirts, and matting pictures goes toward supplies. One current business in Horton's classroom, however, earned enough money for a two-night trip to Chicago.

"We don't compete with businesses that pay taxes to keep our program going," according to Horton, who taught at Adams Junior High School for 19 years before moving into the graphic-design job.

Since he came to the voc-tech center, based in the nearby John Glenn High School, the classroom went from no computers to seven.

"I thank the community of Westland for providing us with this facility," he said, adding that he's rewarded when students have been successful, are earning money, "and then thank us for the head start they get."

The importance of vocational education is best illustrated, Horton said, when college graduates return to the class to learn practical skills in order to get a job.

Horton holds up a student-made sign that trumpets the importance of vocational education: "By the year 2000, 80 percent of new jobs will require education beyond high school, but not a four-year degree" and, "Community, technological and junior colleges are the fastest growing and largest single segment of American education."

Horton praised

Rick Hamrick, Ford Center assistant principal, said the vocational education program no longer fits the traditional stereotype as a wasteland for students who can't make it academically. It's no longer the industrial class where students build birdhouses and that's all they learn.

Businesses work with the vocational education department, providing information about skills, and the relationship benefits businesses, students and companies.

For example, Horton was able to get a $3,700 computer for the school district by setting up a computer system for a manufacturer and training students on it.

Hamrick applauded Horton's high energy and creativity.

"We're on the leading edge of technology," Horton said. "We probably have better equipment than any university for computers and things we're able to do with electronic images. Some students step right out into jobs."

Graphic design may be in Horton's blood. When he was a young boy, his father, Horace Horton, operated a sign shop.

"The things we used to use are all obsolete," said the teacher, with computers replacing work previously done by hand.

Graphics work even followed Horton as a young man, when he was an illustrator touring Vietnam preparing briefings of combat operations for top brass.

"It's always been a part of my life," said Horton, who raises chickens and operates an old printing press in the basement of his rural Ann Arbor home.

Priest lends a hand at lent

There's one more Friday for fish lunches and dinners as the lenten season nears a conclusion with the Easter celebration next weekend.

Local Catholic churches five weeks ago began serving fish dinners in their fellowship halls.

But one church had a different look as its priest was directly involved in the kitchen work and serving meals.

The unusual scene was at St. Theodore Catholic Church where Fr. Michael Molnar was taking a personal hand in the Friday lunches.

Local effect of tax reform unclear, says superindent

The school finance picture for the Wayne-Westland school district is still unclear after legislative approval of a major overhaul of how the state supports schools.

The keys to the overhaul are a major cut of local school property taxes, the equalization of per-pupil spending and possible voters' approval of a sales tax rate increase on the June 2 special election ballot.

But two top Wayne-Westland administrators said there are still several key questions to be answered before they can determine if the changes would benefit the district.

"Preliminarily, the (changes) look favorable to us," said school Superintendent Larry Thomas. But once he gets answers to key questions, "I can get specific."

One major unanswered issue is whether the "chartered" millage in the plan approved overwhelmingly by the state House and Senate is 18 or 27 mills. (One mill represents $1 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation.)

In the initial reports from Lansing, state leaders said the minimum rate would be 18 mills with another 9 mills available for enrichment. But Thomas and Randy Liepa, the district's chief fiscal officer, said it wasn't sure that the the enrichment mills had to be approved by the voters or could be levied by school board action.

Another big question in the school finance overhaul is whether the state will continue to pay for local adult education programs through the state aid formula, based in part on student enrollments.

The district's adult education program generated about $2 million in revenues this year, Liepa said.

While the state plan would continue to support those existing programs, it's unclear whether those districts would be paid in full, Thomas said.

For years, in-formula districts that received state aid on an enrollment basis marketed their adult education programs to boost enrollments — and state revenues.

Under the new plan, Thomas said, there would be no in-formula and out-of-formula districts, thus no need for an adult education program for financial purposes.

In some areas, in-formula districts joined in consortiums with out-of-formula districts to be eligible for more state aid revenues.

Another issue is that while the district's per-pupil spending would increase about 3 percent, it would be responsible for major additional expenses, mainly employees' Social Security payments, previously paid for by the state.

Under the new plan, homeowners could realize a massive property tax cut — from 47.12 to 27 mills, or $700 a year for a home valued at $70,000 and assessed at $35,000. But part of the property tax savings would be offset by a loss of that tax as a federal tax deduction, a reduced state property tax rebate and higher sales tax payments.

"We hope to get answers (to the unanswered questions) when the bills are in writing and when the new state aid act is written," Liepa said. That could be several months.

The finance officer added that if the overhaul is implemented, there would be a cash flow problem for the district.

The district levies half its millage in the summer and half in the winter. If the rate is slashed to 27 mills from 47.12, that would also cut the revenues collected at those times.

Man pleads guilty in stalking case

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER

A Coldwater man accused of stalking his former Westland girlfriend pleaded guilty to a lesser charge in court Thursday and will be sentenced Tuesday.

Michael A. Kelly, 30, pleaded guilty to attempted stalking and could face a maximum sentence of six months in jail, Westland Detective Sgt. Russell Nowaczek said.

Kelly could have faced a year in jail if he had been tried and convicted on a stalking charge.

He had been accused of stalking his 35-year-old former girlfriend from Jan. 14 until March 18. She had wanted to end their several-month relationship.

Kelly repeatedly called the woman and then began sending letters to her Yale Street residence, police said. When the woman refused his advances, Kelly went to her apartment and tried to see her, but she wouldn't let him inside and instead called police, according to police reports.

A warrant was issued for Kelly's arrest, and he turned himself to Westland police March 26. He became the second defendant charged in Westland under a new state stalking law that went into effect Jan. 1.

In the first case, a Dearborn Heights man who stalked a nurse at the Westland branch of Annapolis Hospital received the maximum sentence of a year in jail. Police had accused the man of becoming obsessed with the nurse while he was a patient.

On Thursday, Kelly pleaded guilty to attempted stalking after defense and prosecuting attorneys reached a plea agreement. His former girlfriend came to court prepared to testify, but his guilty plea averted her testimony.

The woman appears satisfied with the plea, Nowaczck said.

"It really wasn't her goal for him to have to go to jail for a year," Nowaczck said. "She just wanted to be left alone."

However, the woman hopes that Kelly receives at least some jail time, amid hopes he will be deterred from stalking her or anyone else in the future, the police detective said.

Under the new state law, convicted stalkers can receive a maximum sentence of one year in jail, a $1,000 fine and five years of probation.

The two city DPS workers involved in the wood delivery were John Foley Jr., now retired, and Michael Cullity, who was subsequently fired for reasons unrelated to the wood dispute.

Based on interviews with the police, employees used city time and a truck to deliver the cedar to a Westland bar in which Mehl is a partner.

In Griffin's case, the employee delivered the wood on city time but used his own vehicle.

It was unclear in Smith's case whether employees were on city time or whether city equipment was used.

The middle-man in the purchases and delivery was Robert Fritz, city building director.

When questioned last fall by police, Fritz said: "I'll admit I was wrong. I did it," referring to his order to Cullity and Foley to deliver cedar to Mehl's bar using city time and a city vehicle.

The 103-page police department report concluded with a two-page statement by the Wayne County prosecutor's office that while there was no evidence that a crime was committed, "the most glaring impropriety probably is the use of the city's discount used by several people to benefit by this fact and the improper use of city equipment and time to deliver wood utilizing city equipment and time."

At the time of the City Hall remodeling, which used substantial amounts of wood, Fritz admitted to police investigators that some wood was delivered to the under-construction Balarney Bay bar on Warren Road west of Inkster Road, owned by Mehl and a partner, and to the homes of Griffin and Smith.

Griffin has since sold his home on Crown near Cherry Hill. Smith admitted buying the cedar through Fritz for installing a ceiling in his cottage near Gaylord.

The three stressed to police that they bought the wood from Weyerhauser's wholesale location in Westland.

The police and prosecutor's office concluded that the three bought the wood through the city's large volume discount price.

The police also said in its lengthy report that there is still about 7,461 feet of wood still missing. Records show that 18,208 feet were bought with 10,747 feet accounted for in the City Hall remodeling.

The investigation into the use and sale of the wood first surfaced last October when a resident questioned the mayor at a city council meeting. The police started their investigation a few days later.

Although the investigation was reported in local newspapers several weeks ago, the names of the current and former public officials weren't disclosed until the police department's report was made available about 10 days ago.

When questioned by police in early November, Mehl said that he never used any City Hall wood for his bar but bought the wood from Weyerhauser and produced canceled checks to document the purchase.

Fritz told police that Mehl asked him if he could buy the wood from Weyerhauser through the city's account and pay for the wood himself.

Griffin said the wood delivered to his former home was delivered in a private truck and that Foley and Cullity were on their lunch hour.

wholesaler, it does represent an ethical question.

Not surprisingly, Thomas disagreed with former mayor Charles Griffin, the man he beat three years ago, that the investigation "has the smell of politics," because a mayoral and city council election will be held later this year.

In a related matter, Thomas added that he will not discipline building director Robert Fritz who admitted to Westland police last fall that he directed two public services department employees to deliver cedar to a Westland bar of which City Councilman Kenneth Mehl is a partner on city time and using a city vehicle.

"I am relucant to punish someone for something he did under another administration," said Thomas, elected in late 1989. The wood was delivered to Mehl and the homes of former mayor Griffin and retired district Judge Thomas.

Mehl, in his third term on the council, told the Observer he was unaware that Fritz had directed city resources to be used in connection with the wood and said he didn't know he was getting the wood at the city's discounted price through a wholesaler.

"I never stole a thing," he said. "I'm not a thief (as) the mayor is trying to make me out to be."

Mehl said politics was behind the mayor's investigation and said he has canceled checks to show he paid for the wood.

Thomas also voiced another problem which came out of the wood purchase problem — that the council is holding him to a much higher performance standard than Griffin, who served one term before being defeated by Thomas in late 1989.

The mayor specifically referred to a recent dispute with the council over his use of a private contractor paid $1,920 to plow snow after a storm. The city charter allows the mayor to spend up to $5,000 without council permission.

"What bothered me the most was the double standard of those people," referring to the council.

The council last month held a public hearing at which the council and union leaders "beat the crap out of me" for using the private contractor.

Thomas pointed out that the double-standard is clear because the council allowed Griffin to proceed with a $500,000 City Hall renovation without a plan or bids.

In a telephone interview Thursday, former mayor Griffin admitted "that in retrospect, I could have and should have gone to the (lumber) wholesaler" on his own without going through the city's building director.

But he pointed out that there was no place locally he could have bought the cedar on a wholesale level.

He said he "resents anyone questioning if I did anything inappropriate."

The former mayor feels the "real issue is that the $1.3 million bid for the renovation was too high and the city went through a construction manager," saving $750,000.

Man charged with robbing gas station ordered to trial

BY DARRELL CLEM
STAFF WRITER

An Inkster man accused in a holdup at a Westland gas station has been ordered to stand trial in Detroit Recorder's Court on a charge of armed robbery.

Donald Denver Emeigh, 30, was bound over for trial after testimony emerged Thursday in Westland District Court that implicated him in a March 23 robbery of a Mobil station at Merriman Road and Cherry Hill.

Station employee Samantha Markey testified during a preliminary examination for Emeigh that he walked into the station, pretended he was going to buy some orange juice and then demanded money.

"I thought he was joking at first," she said.

But Markey realized the intruder was serious when he ordered her to open the cash register and — with his right hand in his pocket — implied that he was carrying a weapon, she said.

"It looked like he had something in his pocket, and I wasn't taking any chances," Markey testified.

Emeigh grabbed about $70 in cash and fled the store, Markey said, but she ran outside and alerted a male customer who began chasing the suspect. The customer was joined in the pursuit by a male worker at a nearby Taco Bell who saw the chase.

The two men tackled the suspect and held him until Garden City police officer Dave Matheny, who happened to be nearby, took over until Westland police officer Jeff Trzybinski arrived, police reports said.

Both police officers came to court prepared to testify against Emeigh on Thursday. But assistant Wayne County prosecutor James Wise, after calling only Markey to the stand, made a motion to have Emeigh bound over for trial.

Emeigh's attorney argued that the charge against Emeigh should be reduced because he never produced a gun.

But 18th District Judge C. Charles Bokos, noting that Markey feared Emeigh had a gun, ordered the suspect to stand trial for armed robbery. Emeigh could face a maximum sentence of life in prison if convicted on the charge.

He is being held in the county jail in lieu of a $100,000 bond. He also is being held for a parole violation stemming from another case, Westland police Sgt. Steve Ryskamp has said.

The March 23 robbery marked the third time that the Mobil station had been robbed since Jan. 11. However, Emeigh is charged only in the most recent incident.

Tests started at Cooper site

BY MARIE CHESTNEY

State environmental workers last week began hammering wooden stakes into the grounds at Westland's Cooper School as investigative efforts got under way on the toxic site in Westland.

By mid-April the stakes, laid out in a grid pattern, should cover the entire site and allow investigators to pinpoint exact spots on the 40-acre site, said state Department of Natural Resources spokeswoman Cheryl Wallace.

The work and tests now under way, paid for by the federal government, are being done to see if federal "Superfund" money can be used to clean up the toxic school site on Ann Arbor Trail between Middlebelt and Inkster Road.

At the urging of Westland's Catherine Pare, who lives near the school, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency last year told the DNR to perform the tests.

The new tests, which started last week, will cover a larger area than that already tested and will further reveal the extent of contamination on the site.

"We're glad to see it happening; we'll have more data, more answers and hopefully it will relieve fears about what might be there," said Pare, spokeswoman for CHECK, a grassroots group which sprang up after news of the contamination first surfaced nearly two years ago.

"Getting them here hasn't been easy. It's been a long two years and we fought for this. But CHECK's efforts have paid off. This wouldn't be happening if we hadn't kept the pressure on."

DNR crews will be at Cooper off and on until nearly the end of April. While they will wear protective gear, none of the work will require investigators to wear "moon-type" gear, Wallace said.

The Livonia school district, which includes the northern section of Westland, have been keeping area residents informed of the work under way through two letters dated March 19 and March 24.

Who will pay for the cleanup of the site is critical to the district which owns the site.

"Even if a site qualifies for 'Superfund' money, the government seeks to have 'potentially responsible parties' pay for investigation and cleanup, instead of spending 'Superfund' money," said Art Howell, director of operations.

Medical liability legislation seeks to toughen regulations

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

Tougher regulations for fewer lawsuits against health care professionals.

That's the deal shaping up between the House and Senate in an effort to curb the outflow of doctors from Michigan.

"We're streamlining the process of licensing and discipline for licensed health care workers," said Rep. John Jamian, R-Bloomfield Township.

Jamian and Rep. David Gubow, D-Oak Park, co-chair of the House Public Health Committee. They produced eight license and discipline bills which the House passed last week by votes ranging from 99-0 to 103-0.

Jamian sponsored the bill to create the "impaired provider" program into which professionals with drug, alcohol or mental problems can be steered for treatment.

Tort bill hit

Meanwhile, the Senate has passed SB 270 to reform medical liability laws. But a snag developed when the House Judiciary Committee last week amended that bill to allow costlier lawsuits.

Spencer Johnson, spokesman for the Michigan Hospital Association, called the House version of the liability bill "grossly inadequate" because it:

- Fails to limit noneconomic ("pain and suffering") awards by allowing "overly broad" exceptions to those limits.
- Inserts a sliding scale for attorney fees that rewards plaintiffs' attorneys for pushing litigation rather than settling.

The hospital association is joined by the Farm Bureau, Michigan Chamber of Commerce and physicians in seeking the tort reform bill.

"I feel it's been watered down," agreed Jamian, who said he would seek floor amendments to SB 270 to bring it closer to the Senate version.

"They go hand in hand," Jamian said.

Faster procedures

The process of limiting the license of a bad doctor will be speeded up to one year from the current two or three years, Jamian said.

"There's a requirement that courts must report convictions of licensed health care professionals to the Department of Commerce (which handles licensing)," he added.

"What's really nice is that there will be more public membership on discipline boards. So the discipline process is a public process, not one behind closed doors."

Two of the bills exempt part of the discipline process from the Open Meetings and Freedom of Information Act. But Jamian said those exceptions apply to the early stages of the complaint process, when regulators are deciding whether to send a case to the discipline or the revocation process.

The bills cover medical doctors, chiropractors, nurses, optometrists, osteopaths, pharmacists, physical therapists, podiatrists, counselors, psychologists, occupational therapists, sanitarians and veterinarians.

The measures are House Bills 4076 through 80, HB 4289, 4290, 4292 and 4295.

One bill allows complaints against foreign doctors with accents so thick that patients can't understand them. "There's a mechanism to let the patient go directly to the medical board so the board can ask the doctor to go to an accent reduction program," Jamian said.

Amann touted for state ticket

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

Mr. Amann goes to Lansing?

Wayne County Commissioner Bryan Amann is being talked about locally as a running mate for state Sen. Debbie Stabenow, D-Lansing, when she runs for governor next year.

Former county commissioner William Joyner, who now runs the Canton Community Foundation, said "you can put money on it" that Amann will be Stabenow's choice for lieutenant governor. "Bryan Amann will be on the statewide ticket in '94," he said.

"Absolutely." (Joyner also picked, but didn't support, Bill Clinton for president in 1989.)

"The Democratic party would be making a big mistake if it doesn't recognize that Bryan Amann is an issue-oriented leader who works best with building coalitions with both parties and all people," Joyner said.

Amann, who also represents Canton Township, said he learned of the rumor when he read about it in "Confluence," a newsletter published by Plymouth city commissioner Dennis Shrewsbury. "I'm flattered and surprised," he said. "What the future holds, Lord knows. I never say never to anything. But this is all very premature and I'm just trying to be a good county commissioner."

■ 'I'm flattered and surprised . . . I never say never to anything. But this is all very premature and I'm just trying to be a good county commissioner.'

Bryan Amann

Although Shrewsbury was first to put the rumor in print, he isn't as confident as Joyner that Amann will be Stabenow's running mate. "(Amann's) name has come up a couple of times," he said. "(But) I'm not willing to go out on the limb on that just yet."

Stabenow did not return the Observer's phone calls by press time.

Amann's fellow county commissioner Kay Beard, D-Westland, doubts the rumor has merit.

"I doubt if (Stabenow) would pick Bryan Amann," she said. "Why should she pick someone from a commission seat who has been so controversial? She needs someone solid."

Beard, who also represents Garden City, added that Amann "will do anything to get his name in the paper."

Wayne County Deputy Executive Michael Duggan said Stabenow/Amann would be a "great ticket. (Amann) is bright. He's hard working. He's honest, and he's as good a campaigner as you'd ever want to see."

Commissioner Thaddeus McCotter, R-Livonia, said, "I would be sorry to see (Amann) leave, but I'd welcome the opportunity to elect another western Wayne County Republican (to the commission)."

Presidential primary bill clears state Senate

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

Michigan voters could see a two-tiered 1996 presidential primary under a bipartisan bill that has cleared the state Senate.

"This will insure that no one will have to declare their party preference in order to vote in the presidential primary," said the sponsor, Sen. Michael Bouchard, R-Birmingham.

Bouchard's SB 168 was born as a bill to create a totally "open" presidential primary in which voters wouldn't have to declare a preference at all. Michigan's last "open" primary occurred in 1976.

But Democrats complained that total openness violated national party rules limiting participation only to declared party members. Federal courts say national party rules take precedence over state law in selecting party convention delegates.

Bouchard cut a deal with Sens. John Kelley, D-Grosse Pointe, and Debbie Stabenow, D-Lansing, allowing:

- An open primary to vote for presidential candidates.
- A closed primary for Democrats to vote for national convention delegates.

"Voter turnout numbers in recent years indicate that citizens were turned off by the party preference requirement," said Bouchard. In 1992 the state used a closed system. In the 1980s, Democrats used a caucus system.

The primary system would be available only to the three parties which received more than 5 percent of the 1992 vote — Democratic, Republican and Ross Perot's United We Stand.

"This is a compromise," said Stabenow. "It is an effort to address a multitude of concerns."

Bouchard said it would give voters a choice while not barring them from voting if they didn't want to pick a party.

Senators gave the bill 32 to 0 approval and sent it to the House. All area senators voted yes.

Sen. Chris Dingell, D-Trenton, complained that the statewide primary would cost $5 million — "awfully expensive for a beauty contest."

Chris Thomas, state elections director, said the two-tiered election could be handled by state and local elections officials.

The Associated Press contributed to this story.

ART ON THE EDGE

STAFF PHOTOS BY SHARON LEMIEUX

Out of necessity: The first abstract mirror Sheri Nudell made was out of a need for one in her bedroom. Now she makes and sells them at design studios.

Glass colors artist's work

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
SPECIAL WRITER

Sheri Nudell fuses sheets of glass into platters and bowls that deal with painterly issues. Combining geometric and organic shapes, she orchestrates a kaleidoscope of color to form imagery influenced by nature.

"In glass, I have found excitement, challenge and endless possibilities that no other medium could offer me," said the Center for Creative Studies glass student in an interview at her Farmington Hills home. "I like how the iridescent glasses give off a shine, how the light passes through. I like watching the progression, the different stages.

"I like cutting the glass. I like watching the image evolve. It's always a surprise when I open the kiln."

Glass first piqued Nudell's interest two years ago while attending Michigan State University in East Lansing as a pharmacology student. She tells the story of passing a stained-glass shop one day, stopping in to find out what it was all about — and after producing her first piece of jewelry, becoming hooked on glass.

Since then, Nudell has advanced to fusing the glass platters and bowls based on nature. Chin-strap penguin, panda bear, zebra and open-mouthed shark snap to life in her glass work.

"Being outdoors in an open field or forest always gives me a magical feeling. By combining the two, glass and nature, I try to convey that feeling in my work," she said. Nudell's abstract shark platter will soon proliferate into a signed and numbered series of 10.

"Sheri uses the format of the platter as a form of painterly expression. In her work, she's chosen to deal with painterly issues as opposed to just decorative art." said Herb Babcock, chairman of the glass and crafts departments at Center for Creative Studies in Detroit.

The element of surprise when working with hot glass necessitates that Nudell keep a technical diary, listing kiln temperatures, colors of glass, designs, and kiln shelf arrangement and spacing for each of the pieces she produces.

"I see each of my pieces as a little experiment. It's a step up the ladder to more architectural glass, to larger work, to sculptural furniture pieces, and it all started from the little jewelry pieces."

Ideas for future glass works come to Nudell at all hours of the day and night. She visits the library often to trigger her imagination.

"I get ideas from everywhere. I started carrying a little notebook with me to record them. A lot of the animal ideas come from picture books at the library."

The idea for her abstract mirrors sprang from necessity. She needed a mirror for her bedroom, so she made one for herself. When a friend came over and saw it, she wanted one. Before long she was producing several a week and selling them in design studios around town. It wasn't long after that, that she came up with the idea for a matching perfume tray.

Two half-spheres of black, white and mauve glasses compose the abstract wall sculpture that hangs in the hallway outside her studio door. Its lyrical line keeps the viewer's eye moving around the work.

"It's all fused together like a giant puzzle."

Nudell's come a long way from that first stained-glass class in East Lansing. After gradu-

Hannibals want album, will travel

■ It sounds more like a vacation plan than what it takes to produce an album. The Hannibals started in Detroit, moved to Canton, then headed for Lancaster, Pa. A lot of miles but well worth the end result, "This Midwestern."

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

Sit in on a recording/mixing session with The Hannibals and you'll learn quickly that it wasn't an easy job finishing their new album "This Midwestern."

Drummer Matt Aljian is trying to spice up the song "Shine It Does" with shaker noises from a glass jar filled with popcorn kernels.

After failing numerous times to get the seeds to fall exactly right with the beat, the quartet and producer Matt King sigh and drop the idea. It looks frustrating but Aljian, formerly of Birmingham, has another word.

He's fallen victim to "shaker shock."

Aside from their minds, recording "This Midwestern" also took its toll on the quartet's vehicles. The East Lansing-based group recorded at the White Room studios in Detroit, finished recording and mixing in Pearl Sound in Canton Township, and then mastered it in Lancaster, Pa.

■ STREET BEATS

The recording was the end product of a three-part testing process. To prepare for the studio, the band performed all of the new songs during recent shows. Outside of gigs, The Hannibals practiced in their basements to "make sure all the part were working well," said singer Chris Johnston. Afterward, they rehearsed upstairs with acoustic guitars to polish the harmonies.

"You play them live and everything sounds good," said Johnston. 'But until you get them stripped down and you can hear what everyone is doing, you want to make sure that (a) the notes are working with each other and (b) you're not singing the same thing.

"We always try to sing harmonies as opposed to just doubling voices."

Third album

"This Midwestern" follows on the heels of two critically acclaimed albums, "Monkey Suit" and "From Can to Can't," and an EP "Hereafter." (A song from the EP, "Harbor in the Shine," appears on the soon-to-be released AIDS benefit CD "Naked Rhythm" on Steam Records.) Johnston said the group didn't feel pressured in making the follow-up.

"There wasn't any hesitation of, 'Well, will this be better than 'Monkey Suit?' ' If it wasn't going to be better than 'Monkey Suit' we wouldn't have even started. We wanted to do something better," said Johnston, a former Birmingham resident.

To diversify its sound, the group hired, for the first time, outside musicians to play pedal steel guitar, flute and Hammond organ. The Hannibals feel it paid off.

"It gives the album more texture," Johnston said.

The name, "This Midwestern," gives more insight into the album's sound as well, he added.

"We wanted it to sound true to what we are and what we do. That is a Midwestern, in particular a Michigan band. We wanted to sound natural and true to what we've grown up listening to and what kind of music you'd expect to come out of the four of us."

Guitarist Chris Geherin said the album is softer yet fuller than the last efforts.

"We've taken the quieter side and let it go a little more to that end. We've done one song completely acoustic which we've done in the past but not as seriously. There's another quiet song with some different instrumentation," Geherin said.

The Hannibals' caring about instrumentation has apparently paid off throughout their career. In March, the group participated in the South by Southwest music conference in Austin, Texas. Last year the group played in the College Music Journal Music Marathon.

Full-time job

The band is a full-time job to most of the members of the band, which also includes bassist Scott Owens. Johnston takes care of the booking, Aljian takes care of distribution, and Geherin handles managerial and legal matters. Geherin also writes most of the lyrics.

None of that garners much money for members of The Hannibals.

"We're extremely poor; the amount of hours that we work (compared to) what we get paid is miniscule. But it's been good. You learn to live on not much money. Your priorities get straightened out a bit," Johnston said.

But, he added, he's hoping others appreciate the time and effort put into The Hannibals and "This Midwestern."

"After four years of playing out, we've developed a pretty good name for ourselves other than Detroit, East Lansing, Ann Arbor." There are a lot of people waiting for the album — at least we think," Johnston said.

The Hannibals will celebrate the release of "This Midwestern" at Industry, 15 S. Saginaw, in Pontiac, on Thursday, April 8, with a party and mainstage performance. For more information, call 334-1999. To order a copy of the AIDS benefit CD "Naked Rhythm" call Steam Records at 1-800-795-8403.

Stereo MC's connect with 'Connected'

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

"Elevate your mind and your body will follow."

That spin on the Parliament/Funkadelic song title could be the new motto for the dance band Stereo MC's. Keeping its free-spirited yet socially conscious lyrics, the London, England, group evolved musically for its third album to connect further with its audience.

Brit sound: Stereo MC's include Andrea, Owen and Verona (top row, from left) Rob B., Nick a.k.a. "The Head" and Cath Coffey (botton row, from left).

"With 'Connected,' we had a lot of musical ideas. We ended up trying to take them a great deal further," rapper Rob B. explained about his group's latest album.

DJ and remixer The Head agreed.

"This album has still got all those influences — from reggae to dance to rap to soul to funk to whatever — but because we are using live musicians instead of samples and made up the parts instead of taking the parts of records, it's really developed into something more of a representation of what we are about," he said.

"Connected" is the follow-up release to 1990's "Supernatural" which spawned the Top 40 hit "Elevate My Mind," the first UK rap single to place high on Billboard charts. During the single's reign, Rob B. explained, the press misunderstood the group's mission.

"We don't see ourselves as a rap group," he said. "We see ourselves as a group. We pay all our respects to the people who started rap, funk, reggae, and soul music.

"We have total respect for rap music in America. We know we got nothing to do with the American rap scene. We're doing our music and anybody who wants to check it out is welcome to check it out."

That's part of the group's mission — to bring people together, he said.

"We try to get as many people as we can on the same train of thought. I don't think we're saying anything different. I think it can get through to a lot of people. uplift people and give people strength."

Stereo MC's opens for Jesus Jones at the State Theatre, 2115 Woodward, Detroit, Friday, April 16. Tickets are $17.50 in advance; $20 at the door. Showtime is 8 p.m. Tickets for the show scheduled at The Palace of Auburn Hills are good for main floor general admission at the State. Refunds for The Palace show will be available until April 11 only. Call 961-5451 or 645-6666 for more information.

Strange chemistry works for Malone and Nootcheez

Yuke, yuke: For more than 20 years, Dennis "D.C." Malone and Hampton Nootcheeze have proven that their brand of musical mayhem and strange chemistry works.

BY BOB SADLER
SPECIAL WRITER

■ COMEDY

Burns and Allen. Abbott and Costello. Laurel and Hardy. Hope and Crosby. Rowan and Martin. The Smothers Brothers.

History is full of great comedy duos. However, with the advent of one-mike comedy and countless cable stand-up shows, the comedy duo has become something of a vanishing breed.

Enter Malone and Nootcheez. At the risk of sounding overly cliched, these guys are just plain funny. They've been in the comedy biz for more than 20 years, and their brand of musical mayhem and strange chemistry works.

To give you an idea of this strange chemistry, take a picture of this. In this corner Dennis "D.C" Malone is 6 feet, 5 inches tall and weighs in at 250 pounds. He looks like a cross between Metallica and the World Wrestling Federation. In fact, his original nickname was a play on the whole wrestling thing — 'Pscyclone" Malone. Now entering the ring, Hampton Nootcheez (surprisingly not his real name), who comes in and is immediately dwarfed by his much larger partner. His name was conceived in a bar after a few Bloody Marys and a couple rounds of breadsticks immersed in a unique cheese dip — so fresh it was dubbed "new cheese." The Hampton part was inspired by jazz luminary Lionel Hampton.

Malone and Nootcheez were not originally a comedy duo. They actually started out as part of a group of street musicians in Toronto.

"We played Frank Zappa songs and wrote songs that sounded like Frank Zappa songs," said Malone of the early days.

Later, after the group was pared down to a mere two people, the seemingly mismatched duo made its way to Detroit, where they met a guy named Mark Ridley.

"Ridley had this great idea: He started this club, but he had no comedians," Malone recalled. "He decided to polish up some people. We were still doing our songs. He told us to throw out all the stuff that wasn't funny and do everything else. He was a genius."

This changeover in the act led to a weekly slot in Ridley's comedy lineup, along with the others who have since gone on to comic stardom (Tim Allen, Dave Coulier, etc.).

"They used to open for us; now they won't take our calls," Malone said, laughing.

Music still plays an integral part in the humor of Malone and Nootcheez. Dialogue ricochets back and forth and laughs come quickly.

"It's been called a Smothers Brothers routine at warp speed," Nootcheez said. "We like to start an actual song, intending to do it. We try to make it look natural like we're just goofing around."

"People have asked what kind of music we play," Malone added. "Basically, it boils down to folk slop, be-bop, rock, pop and jazz."

It's been a long time coming, but the duo makes a homecoming of sorts this week. Malone, in particular, is happy to be back.

"We're returning to our roots and origins in Detroit at Mark Ridley's," he said.

Malone and Nootcheez appear Tuesday through Sunday, April 6-10, at Mark Ridley's Comedy Castle, 269 E. Fourth, Royal Oak. Call 542-9900 for reservations.

'Falling' without political correctness

BY JOHN MONAGHAN
SPECIAL WRITER

In 1968, Burt Lancaster starred in "The Swimmer." He played a disillusioned ad exec who decides it's time to walk home even though his home and family no longer exist. He stops for dips in various private and public pools along the way, all with their own memories.

Michael Douglas' character in "Falling Down," en route to his daughter's birthday party through a labyrinth of urban obstacles, is a "Swimmer" for the '90s. While the ethnic stereotypes he encounters and questionable politics he espouses have many critics up in arms, you'll be hard pressed to find a bolder statement coming from Hollywood this year.

It begins with Michael Douglas as a white-shirted Everyman stuck in a steamy L.A. traffic jam. It's bad enough that his air conditioning and window handle don't work. He also has to look at suction cup-footed Garfields, inane bumper stickers and cellular phone callers through his dirty windshield.

Mad as hell and unable to take it anymore, he ditches his car and begins walking. When someone asks where he's going, he simply replies, "I'm going home."

Armed only with a suitcase and the pens poking up from his pocket protector, the man (known only by his personalized license plate D-FENS) enters a small Korean-run grocery to get change for the phone. In a spontaneous act of vigilantiism, D-FENS objects to the store owner's refusal to make change and the inflated price of a can of Classic Coke by smashing up the place with a baseball bat.

This early scene, which has offended many Korean-Americans, just begins a list of the nation's perceived ills that D-FENS encounters and often violently solves. The homeless, savings and loans, fastfood, street gangs, needless government spending, neo-Nazis, plastic surgery and private golf courses all meet with D-FENS' wrath.

And agree with him or not, this is what makes "Falling Down" so utterly fascinating. If 20 years from now you had to research a movie that sums up rabid white urban paranoia in post-Rodney King L.A., look no further.

I originally steered clear of this movie (which opened almost a month ago) because of Michael Douglas, who I've long considered a pale shadow of his great actor/father Kirk. Here, ticking away beneath the nerdy engineer's facade, he comes as close as he ever will to matching the old man's intensity. At times he's simply astounding.

The movie is full of talented people, both in front of and behind the camera. Barbara Hershey plays D-FENS' frightened ex-wife, who realizes that she is at the end of his cross-town trek. Frederic Forrest supplies a bizarre, Dennis Hopper-style rendering of a neo-Nazi army surplus store owner.

Robert Duvall, as the policeman Prendergast on his last day on the force, and Tuesday Weld, as his nagging wife, seem almost superfluous, but provide a breather from D-FENS' intense odyssey. It becomes a matter of pride that Prendergast crack this final case.

If you have a comment for John Monaghan, call him at 953-2047, mailbox number 1866, on a touch tone phone, or write him care of Street Scene, Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150.

Who says? D-FENS (Michael Douglas) is confronted by two gang members in a scene from "Falling Down."

MUSIC NOTES

"My name is Prince and I am funky."

That's how Prince opened his show Thursday at the Fox Theatre in Detroit. It's not like the 5,000 screaming fans didn't already know that.

From then on, the show, which included a loose plot about a king's daughter falling for Prince, turned into a three-hour dance fest. Prince and his pistol-shaped microphone backed by a 16-piece band/entourage covered much of his 15-year career. From "Sexy MF" to "7" to "Let's Go Crazy," Prince and his 10 costume changes kept the sold-out vogue audience on its feet.

Prince's overtly sexual demeanor sometimes weighed heavily on the show but that didn't seem to bother his fans.

Rhythm and blues band the Sun Messengers gathered three nominations to lead the list of 1993 Motor City Music Award Nominees announced recently.

The awards, hosted by WLLZ's Ken Calvert, will be presented on Thursday, April 8, at the State Theatre in Detroit. Tickets are on sale at TicketMaster outlets.

Other bands receiving multiple nominations were Damn Yankees, DC Drive, The Goldentones, Tramaine, The Charm Farm, George Beddard, Red C, Me Phi Me, Straight Ahead, Gangster Fun, Goober & The Peas, Marcus Belgrave, Roy Brooks, The Winans and War on Sin.

The recording studios, The White Room and The Tempermill, received two nominations each.

The second annual awards ceremony will also feature performances by Brotherhood Recipee, former Southfield resident Keith Washington, Ted Nugent, Alexander Zonjic, The Chisel Bros., The Clark Sisters and country star Dennis Robbins, formerly of the Rockets. MsX — "The Ladies Came To Rock!"

The ladies came to rock and that they did.

The first release from Detroit's latest garage-rock band is surprising not because it was independently recorded and released, or that there are only six cuts on this release. No, the big catch is the quality of the music.

Starting with the leading brash track "The Ladies Came to Rock'n'roll" to the ending blues cut "Shirt & Tie," the tracks carry out a solid balance of strong electric guitar and bass combined with full vocals that compliment one another. The song topics are primarily rock-love anthems with elementary verses which weigh the music down.

Overall, these ladies are ready to rock and should not be ignored.

Best Kissers in The World — "Puddin' "

For the hundredth time, no we don't know if they live up to their name. The music, however, will make you pucker. The sweet, blazing guitars, clever lyrics, and intense stage presence is what kept the audience moshing during their opening stint with School of Fish recently at St. Andrew's Hall in Detroit. It'll keep you going through the entire length of the five-song EP, too, which includes the first single "Pickin' Flowers For."

April is Michigan Glass Month, so Nudell will exhibit work in a group show at the Woods Gallery of the Huntington Woods Library.

Former Gov. William Milliken first proclaimed April as Michigan Glass Month 13 years ago to promote glass as an art medium. As a result, the contemporary studio glass movement — individual artists creating glass artworks in studios outside a factory setting — is a relatively young phenomenon.

POINTS OF VIEW

An open mind helps preserve our democracy

My father was born in Scotland, and I proudly fly his beautiful golden flag with its royal red Scottish lion in my front yard. But it waves there in the wind beneath the Stars and Stripes, because I'm a Scot second and an American first.

I am also a former teacher and coach of champion track teams in Detroit's inner city. Scores of my students became top professionals in many fields due in part to my efforts to secure college scholarships for them.

When ultimately I moved into administration, I was soon promoted a second time — mid-year — to an inner-city high school department chairmanship from my junior high school department head job in that same neighborhood. The junior high's white principal had recently been ousted by a turbulent community, so I had to be summoned back to the junior high the following week to reassure a student multitude camped out in front of the new black principal's office that I had indeed been promoted, rather than fired because I was white.

When Detroit's affirmative action promotion policies finally spurred me to leave Detroit in 1969 to accept a suburban high school assistant principalship, Free Press sportswriter Hal Schram mourned my departure under the headline, "Inner city loses the good doctor." My former athletes asserted in print that I had "brought out the best" in them.

Several times during the following decades, I tried to return — the last time as a candidate for Detroit's superintendency. Later, as Rochester Schools' assistant superintendent, I recruited black administrators despite the raucous protests of community bigots.

One of those superb administrators — assistant principal Gene Seaborn of

JOHN TELFORD

99 percent white Hart Middle School — would come in to school at 6:30 a.m. to shoot baskets with a troubled eighth-grader he was trying to help.

When I retired from Rochester Schools in 1991, hundreds of my inner-city Detroit athletes attended the retirement dinner, including a Baltimore doctor who flew in to speak.

Now comes Kwame Kenyatta, a new Detroit School Board member who voted against pledging allegiance to the flag at board meetings. This is the same flag that Martin Luther King revered. Which flag would Kenyatta then salute — the red, black and green of African nationalism? The Stars and Bars the Old South raised in defense of slavery?

Our Stars and Stripes symbolize that very same American democracy which guards Kenyatta's freedom and upholds his right to express his views.

Kenyatta also is urging Detroit parents to boycott an academy to be opened next fall by Jesuit priests to teach black males. He claims that whites aren't qualified to teach black students. Perhaps he doesn't think that blacks should be teaching white students, either.

Gene Seaborn and I are living, breathing evidence disproving such ethnocentric thinking, which brings escalating evil to this troubled land, including institutional racism and recent rioting and a devastating terrorist bombing.

We must unite to counter the views of Kwame Kenyatta and others like him, such as David Duke and Louis Farrakhan and Nidal Ayyad, one of the accused World Trade Center bombers.

Whatever our cultural origins, all citizens of our multicultural country are going to have to start regarding ourselves — and each other — as Americans first.

John Telford, a Rochester Hills resident, most recently was assistant superintendent in the Rochester district. He previously was executive director for secondary education in the Plymouth-Canton Schools. To leave a message for Telford from a Touch-Tone phone, dial 953-2047, mailbox 1879.

Teachers fed up with boss' obscure language

For a long time I thought it was just me. Being a seventh generation redneck, I don't tend to believe much in philosophers, other than Hank Williams Jr., or look for more inspiration than you can receive while fly fishing or spending an evening with Jack Daniels.

But it's not just me. In a recent column, I tossed a few barbs at the intellectual mush mouthed by educational philosophers and lamented that for the money we're paying these guys to educate our kids, they can at the very least speak English instead of educationalese.

My own poor kid who attends Livonia schools cringed when he saw the column. He figured it would be another bad week with his teachers because of the column. Usually his bad weeks are brought on by nobody but himself.

I figured I'd receive a few hate letters from teachers and others, publish them and put the thing to rest. I don't like to cover the same turf more than once. Newspaper columns can be boring enough, this one included, without covering the same landscape two weeks in a row.

But I had to do it. It was the teachers who called and persuaded me. And their calls weren't nasty. They all liked the column.

Here's a sampling.

■ From George Zeff of Southfield, a former educator. "I admire your educational philosophy."

David Juhnke of Plymouth Township, a former educator who is now in industry, called to say he's glad the Observer is taking on the bureaucracy.

JEFF COUNTS

"I was about to give up on the Observer with its liberal views."

I also received the following letter from Bob Kroeger:

Your article on our educational philosophers was wonderful. I really can't thank you enough for exposing them and their claptrap. Everyone here at Plymouth Salem High School I have talked to agrees with you 100 percent.

Please understand that the overwhelming majority of us teachers do not buy what is being pushed on us. It is the grandiose idea of a few who think they have infinite wisdom. It is sad, no tragic, that educational decisions are made most of all of the time by people who have never taught or have not been in the classroom in 20 or more years.

One teacher in the Plymouth Canton schools, who didn't want to be named, called to say that the problem with some school administrators is that they are really wannabe college professors. The caller said: "I've had the same feeling in meetings that you have. I don't know what these guys are talking about and neither do a lot of other teachers."

MY TURN: Hopefully parents and teachers can join forces and press the school administrators in their communities to speak English and make their ideas clear to the public.

What are the chances? Not too good. Colleges of education seem to be pumping out these mushed mouthed clones on an assembly line basis. Being an educational philosopher has got to be a good job. The task is to predict what schools should be like in 10 to 20 years. The only trouble is most of these guys will be retired by the time anybody gets to test their predictions.

Kay Beard to meet with D.C. officials

Wayne County Commission Vice Chair Kay Beard, a Democrat representing Westland and Garden City, travels to Washington D.C. next week for a conference on employment and education.

Beard was invited by U.S. Secretary of Labor Robert Reich and Secretary of Education Richard Riley because she chairs the employment steering committee of the National Association of Counties.

The idea of the conference is to promote President Bill Clinton's program to begin "strengthening the connection between summer jobs and education" for teenagers. The conference will occur April 13 and 14.

Beard said she is "very excited to have the opportunity to have this involvement on the national level."

Vision for state economy

Speakers say it's time to lead, gain control for future

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

They aren't calling it the power of positive thinking, but that's what it is.

Michigan Future, Inc. prefers to refer to it as "vision," but the idea is a lot like what the Lost Boys recommended to Peter Pan so he could fly, "Think happy thoughts."

That was the message last week as Michigan Supreme Court Justice James Brickley and Michigan Future project director Louis Glazer had a long talk with about 90 officials from cities, school districts, churches and businesses at an Oakland Community College seminar, encouraging them to think positive thoughts about the state economy.

The premise is that our economy is in flux, and the low-skill, high-wage, assembly-line jobs are giving way to high-skill, high-wage jobs that require workers to have a lot more decision-making authority than they've had in the past.

The problem is that Michigan residents don't have a good idea of where they're headed in the future. The answer is to get a "vision" of what we want society and the economy to look like, then work really hard to get there.

Michigan, Glazer said, can either get with the program and be a "leader" as these changes occur, or be left behind floundering with everyone else who doesn't know or care what's happening.

"There's something going on out there and it isn't just the fact that autos aren't selling this year," said Glazer.

(Glazer was was filling in for Michigan Future director and founder Doug Ross, who has taken a leave of absence to become the assistant secretary for employment and training under U.S. Secretary of Labor Robert Reich.)

Justice Brickley, who is on the Michigan Future board, said it's "far better that we be prepared for something that's inevitable, but also that we play a leadership role (and) have a vision of what it is that we're shooting for. We want to control our future and not be a victim of it."

Brickley and Glazer admit to being short on specifics regarding how everything should change, but they figure that "people's ingenuities are wonderful in figuring out how to get there," said Glazer, adding that the Michigan Future plan "is a work in progress."

Audience members seemed impressed with the Michigan Future idea.

Sister Regina Marie Doelker, the principal of Mercy High School in Farmington Hills, said "it's good to hear people looking at something in a positive way."

J. Cristy Osborn, a candidate for Southfield mayor, said she came to the seminar completely ignorant of what Michigan Future is, but left the auditorium calling the plan "an excellent program. This (presentation) has restored my faith in mankind." Having a good vision, she said, is "90 percent of the battle."

Osborn's campaign manager, Sally Tilley, is a gym teacher in Allen Park schools. The students there, she said, "don't have any vision. You see it every day. They don't think they're going to be around for a very long time."

Deputies fear feud between exec, sheriff

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

Whose deputies are they anyway?

While county Executive Edward McNamara and Sheriff Robert Ficano joust about who controls the 95 deputies at Metro Airport, the deputies themselves are getting nervous.

Sgt. Bob Sheldon, president of Local 3317 representing the department's sergeants and lieutenants, said his men are "afraid" and "don't want to be in the middle. There's a lot of apprehension right now."

Ficano has spoken to all the deputies, Sheldon said, "putting more fear into our members. We don't care who we work for as long as we have our jobs. We don't want to be in the middle."

Ficano blames longtime foe McNamara: "Apparently, the vendetta continues," he said. "It's too bad that government has to be run by confrontation. He just wants to control (the airport deputies)."

The conflict stems from Metro Airport Director Robert Braun's consideration of a separate police force for the airport, currently patrolled by 95 sheriff's deputies.

Braun says Ficano hinders airport security by countermanding orders to deputies and otherwise not cooperating with what airport management wants.

Ficano says that's not true and that McNamara ordered the creation of a separate airport police force just to strip Ficano of some of his cops. (Last year McNamara tried to unseat Ficano by heavily financing Redford resident Kevin Kelley in the Democratic primary for sheriff.)

■ 'It's too bad that government has to be run by confrontation. He just wants to control (the airport deputies).'

Robert Ficano
sheriff

■ Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara is a player in the conflict which stems from the consideration of a separate police force for the airport.

State and federal law gives airport directors authority over law enforcement at the airport, and state law gives those directors the right to form airport police forces.

Conversely, Ficano points to the Michigan Constitution, which says county sheriffs are in charge of all deputies.

However, an airport operating agreement Ficano and McNamara signed last year says, "The Airport Sheriff Division, through the Sheriff, will be controlled and directed by the (airport) Director."

Both sides agree the airport deputies are doing a good job and say their main concern is public safety and that the other side is jeopardizing it.

"The bigger issue is obviously public safety," Ficano said. "To play politics with this would be disastrous."

But Ficano has told deputies that any of them who transfer to an airport police force will be stripped of their police powers if they return to the sheriff's department, making them virtually useless as cops.

Deputy Don Cox, the president of Local 502 representing all sheriff's deputies, said the union will take Ficano to court if he tries that. It wouldn't be much different, he said, if Ficano said all Catholic officers would be stripped of their police powers.

"There's no reason to threaten (deputies) like that," Cox said. "He's causing a lot of apprehension within our rank and file."

Although the officers patrolling Metro are sheriff's department personnel, the airport budget covers the $8 million annual expense of keeping them there, Braun said. That money could be used to form a separate airport police force, Braun said, using the same men and women who are already there.

But Ficano, Braun said, has lately taken to claiming his authority over the deputies working at Metro and "countermanded certain of our orders. We have some fundamental disagreements."

The last straw, according to Braun, came when Ficano spoke to the Metro detail, calling himself "the 800-pound gorilla" in a threatening way and asserting his authority over them.

Ficano says, "I don't recall making that remark," but union president Sheldon said he did.

Cox also believes Ficano made the statement. "A lot of my rank and file said that the statement was said," he said.

However, Cox and Sheldon both stressed they aren't taking sides in the argument. "We lose if we choose a side and oppose one or the other," Cox said.

"We take a chance of being harmed. We're professional police officers and we'll do our jobs regardless of the bosses." (Both unions supported Kevin Kelley in the Democratic primary for sheriff last year.)

TASTE BUDS

CHEF LARRY JANES

For cleaning, cooking, the answer is a lemon

Pucker up, sweetie!

They say that spring has finally arrived. Although I've yet to put away the old snow blower, I firmly believe that winter has pretty much passed us by. Now is the time to begin enjoying the fruits of spring and summer, especially fresh lemons.

In all honesty, I enjoy using lemons year-round. I douse sauteed flank steak with lemon juice when creating a Janes family favorite — fajitas, and even marinate chicken in it for Chinese stir-fry.

I relish the smell of freshly grated lemon rind, and use it to perk up cheesecakes and Caesar salad.

I wouldn't think of not inserting a few slices of lemon when pan-frying fish, and I relish the lemony aroma that fills the kitchen after I shove a lemon down the garbage disposal.

Juicy history

Lemons were grown in Italy as early as the first century. We know this because lemons are depicted in certain Roman artworks of that period. After barbarians invaded Italy in the fourth century wide destruction of lemon orchards virtually stopped all lemon agriculture. They popped up again in Spain around the start of the 11th century.

Christopher Columbus brought lemons to Haiti in 1493, and Spanish explorers, including Ponce DeLeon, brought them to Florida in 1512.

Medicinal value

By 1600, some of the naval physicians of the major world powers were aware that daily rations of lemon juice prevented outbreaks of scurvy among sailors of long sea voyages. Lemons were used because they stayed fresh for up to six months whereas oranges usually spoiled within three weeks.

The California lemon industry began shortly after the Gold Rush of 1849. Miners also ate lemons to prevent scurvy caused by the lack of fresh fruits and vegetables.

By the time railroads were put into place in the 1860s, transportation to populated East Coast cities made California the world's leading lemon producer.

Rivaled by the Italian lemon industry, California still leads the nation, and even beats out Florida, for the best lemons produced anywhere.

With more than half the North American lemon crop being processed into lemon juice and frozen concentrates, you can visit any market and see an abundance of fresh lemons in the middle of a cold winter as well as on a hot summer's eve. Store lemons in the refrigerator in a plastic bag for up to two weeks.

The peel, pulp and seeds are sold throughout North America and used to make lemon oil, lemon wax, fragrances, bioflavonoids (vitamin substances) and cattle feed ingredients.

Cleaning up

Yours truly likes to make real lemonade, (see recipe inside) and frequently uses lemon juice in place of vinegar when making salad dressings.

With the industry leaning away from wood cutting boards toward the newer, and harder to clean, Polyethelene, I've taken to rubbing a cut lemon over my chopping board at least once a week.

Not trying to sound like helpful Heloise, I don't have a fan in my bathroom, and the wallpaper was getting a little moldy in the corners. I didn't want to use bleach for cleaning because it would have whitened the paper. I took some bottled lemon juice, poured it onto an old rag, and wiped the mildew away. Not only did it not bleach the wallpaper, but the old bathroom smelled great! Caution, test a small unnoticeable area before trying to do this at home.

Here's another tip from the Old Farmer's Almanac "Hearth & Home Companion, 1993" — to remove cloudy mineral deposits from drinking glasses, put one tablespoon of lemon juice in each glass and fill with hot water. Let stand for several hours, then wash.

One of the neatest tricks I ever saw using a lemon was when Guiliano Bugialli, the famed Italian chef, was conducting a class at Kitchen Glamor. He needed about ¼ cup of fresh lemon rind, and placed a sheet of kitchen parchment paper over the fine grating edge of a hand grater.

The rind was easily removed from the paper and the grater never needed a wash as the parchment was never cut, but acted as a grating surface.

With spring knocking at our doors, now would be a great time to pick up a few lemons and create something that reeks of warm weather. Bon Appetit!

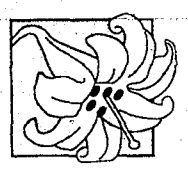
Celebrate Easter

FOCUS ON WINE

ELEANOR & RAY HEALD

GREEK style



Greeks invented the Olympic Games and their Mediterranean diet is lean and healthy. There's no better time than Easter to discover some classic Greek dishes.

Subtitles of books frequently give the biggest clue to the contents. In the late 1980s, "The Mediterranean Diet" by Carol and Malcolm McConnell, (W.W. Norton & Co., New York) got us thinking with their subtitle, "Wine, Pasta, Olive Oil, and a Long Healthy Life." Late last year, "The French Paradox and Beyond." by Perdue, Marton, and Shoemaker, (Renaissance Publishing, Calif.) triggered the same reaction with the subtitle "Live Longer with Wine & the Mediterranean Lifestyle."

There's probably no better time than Easter to take a broad look at a classic Mediterranean diet. The specific Mediterranean focus is Greek food and wine for an authentic Easter menu. There may be no better authority on the subject of Greek feasting than Diane Kochilas who has authored "The Food and Wine of Greece" (St. Martin's Press, New York, 1990).

Kochilas grew up in the United States, but now lives in Athens. She was in the United States earlier this year for the 1993 International Conference on the Diets of the Mediterranean at the Harvard School of Public Health.

The optimal, traditional Mediterranean diet consists of the following foods in decreasing quantities consumed daily — breads and grains, including pasta, rice, couscous, polenta and bulgur; fruits, vegetables, beans (or other legumes and nuts), cheese, yogurt and other dairy products, olive oil and olives.

Following the Mediterranean tradition, one to two glasses per day of wine can be enjoyed primarily with meals. Again in decreasing amounts — fish, poultry and eggs and sweets are eaten a few times per week. Lean red meats are consumed a few times per month.

A traditional Greek Easter meal would include fresh lettuce salad, classic spinach pie filled with fresh spring herbs, colored eggs, roast leg of lamb or spit-roasted lamb or goat, roasted potatoes, Easter bread, and for dessert, Kaltsounia Cretis (sweet cheese pastries from Crete) or Melitinia Santorinis (sweet cheese tartlets from Santorini).

In Greece, the preparation of Easter foods begins on Holy (Maundy) Thursday. Coloring eggs is part of the tradition. "In fact," says Kochilas, "the day is sometimes called Kokkinopefti, or the day on which the red falls." Greek Easter eggs are dyed the color of blood, deep red, a practice that began in Byzantium. Once colored, they are polished with a cloth dipped in olive oil.

The color symbolizes the blood of Jesus Christ, but the egg itself is symbolic of life, rebirth and spring. The eggs are eaten to break the Lenten fast, after the midnight Mass on Holy Saturday.

They are also used to decorate the Tsoureki or Lambropsomo, traditional Greek Easter bread which is made from three long dough ropes, symbolizing the Holy Trinity. The dough is braided and sometimes sprinkled with sesame seeds or almond slivers or decorated with dough designs.

Arni/Katsikaki Souvlas (spit-roasted whole baby lamb or goat) is synonymous with the classic Greek Easter meal. "It's more common on the mainland than on the islands," Kochilas said. "In the Aegean, generally, the classic Easter lamb or goat dish is stuffed whole with rice and herbs, and baked slowly, usually in the village wood-burning bread oven."

"Wine is a custom during meals in some Mediterranean countries," Dr. Dimitrios Trichopoulos, chairman of Epidemiology, Harvard School of Public Health said. "Drunk in moderation with meals, it reduces risk of coronary disease about as much as the regular taking of aspirin." Asked if the Mediterranean diet might be just as healthy if wine

WINE SELECTIONS OF THE WEEK

For Greek wines of quality the nod goes to J. Boutari & Son for three wines all priced at $7: 1991 Boutari Kretikos, a deliciously crisp white wine; 1990 Boutari Naoussa, a very dry, flavorful red that will harmonize with lamb; and 1990 Boutari Nemea that is full and robust, but with soft tannins to pair it well with spinach pie.

Jewish community cookbooks feature Passover

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER

If you're looking for something new to serve during Passover, and throughout the year, the National Council of Jewish Women and Sisterhood of Shaarey Zedek can help. Both groups recently published cookbooks filled with recipes for traditional favorites, and lots of new low-fat ones too.

Passover is an eight-day celebration of the liberation of ancient Hebrews from slavery in Egypt some 3,000 years ago. Tonight, the first day of Passover, Jewish families will celebrate with a feast called a seder. It is a ceremonial dinner marked by the retelling of the story of exodus from Egypt through prayers, songs and ceremonial foods.

No leavened bread is eaten during Passover. Other foods containing yeast or leavening agents are forbidden by Jewish law to be eaten during Passover. This is to remind Jews that they were forced to leave Egypt in a hurry, and couldn't wait for their bread dough to rise.

Although there are dietary restrictions, Passover is a happy time spent with family and friends reflecting on what it means to be free, and to practice your religion without fear.

"When I make the holiday dinner, I put so much love and attention into it that it's the richest, and most satisfying meal," said Dorie Shwedel, who contributed to "From Generation to Generation," a 400-page, hard-cover cookbook of more 700 kitchen-tested kosher recipes by members of the Sisterhood of Congregation Shaarey Zedek in Southfield.

The book is available by mail for $20, plus $3 postage and handling — Congregation Shaarey Zedek Sisterhood, 27375 Bell Road, Southfield 48034. Make checks payable to Sisterhood, Congregation Shaarey Zedek. For information, call 357-5544.

Grandma's Easter bread work of art

KEELY WYGONIK

Her customers at Grecian Tower Restaurant in Livonia call Sylvia Kaplantzes "the doctor." Whenever they get a cold, she prescribes bowls of lemony chicken soup that soothe and comfort their sniffles.

To her grandchildren she is "Ya Ya," grandma. "They love my Easter bread," she said. The braided sweet bread, decorated with a hard-cooked egg dyed red, is a work of art.

Sylvia made the bread to illustrate the Greek Easter story our wine columnists Ray and Eleanor Heald wrote. Always the perfectionist when it comes to cooking, Sylvia made an early Easter season trip to Greek town in Detroit to buy the special red dye to color the eggs.

A member of Nativity of the Virgin Mary Greek Orthodox Church in Plymouth Township Kaplantzes and her family celebrate Easter on April 18, a week later than the Western Christian churches, according to the Greek Orthodox rite.

Easter is a special time at the Kaplantzes. On Holy Saturday, Easter eve, the family attends midnight Mass. The Book of Acts is read at a simulated grave of Our Lord. Family members eat hard-cooked eggs after mass to break the Lenten fast. Cracking egg shells by hitting your egg against a family member's egg is part of the fun.

"Everytime we crack the eggs we say 'Christ is Risen,'" said Kaplantzes.

Syliva and her husband Steven recently celebrated their 33rd wedding anniversary. They opened Grecian Tower Restaurant, 522-2807, at 31116 Five Mile Road, Livonia, 20 years ago.

If you don't have time to bake your own Greek Easter bread, visit Hellenic Market and Bakery at 33308 Seven Mile, 476-2080, just east of Farmington Road in Livonia.

They have Greek Easter bread, and a variety of other specialty Greek items including wines, and the dye to color Easter eggs

Special thanks also to Wendy Wagenheim and Laurel Portner, co-chairwomen of the "Still Fiddling in the Kitchen," cookbook committee, for preparing the beautiful seder plate and crispy potato chicken that Dan Dean photographed for the Passover story.

were removed Trichopoulos said, "I don't think so."

With this positive intro, let's look at some Greek wines to accompany Kochilas' menu suggestions. Because Southeast Michigan has a significant Greek population and a number of fine Greek restaurants, it also has one of the largest selections of Greek wines.

More than half of Greece's vineyards are in the Peloponnese area producing more than a third of the country's wine. By far, the best wines here are red and from the Nemea region. The principal Nemea producer is a cooperative using the name Hercules.

The Naoussa region (west of Thessaloniki) in northern Greece has the best red wines and those produced by J. Boutari and Son top the list. Boutari is an established producer making wine in modern facilities in several appellations throughout Greece.

chairwoman Marilyn Karbal. "There's a kids chapter, which you hardly ever see in a cookbook, and the history of our synagogue. There are traditional, and modern recipes."

One of the unusual recipes is Israeli Charoset. This apple-nut-wine mixture symbolizes the mortar made to hold together the bricks the Jews produced while slaves in Egypt. (See recipe inside).

"Passover becomes a family reunion," said Wendy Wagenhein, who co-chaired the cookbook committee for "Still Fiddling in the Kitchen," with Laurel Portner. Recently published by the National Council of Jewish Women, Greater Detroit Section, the hardcover, spiral-bound cookbook is a collection of 400 kitchen-tested, recipes that are sensitive to the kosher cook.

"Still Fiddling in the Kitchen," is $15, plus $3 postage and handling, and available by mail from — NCJW-Greater Detroit Section, 30233 Southfield Road, Southfield 48076. It's also available at Borders Book Shop, Vic's Market, and Kitchen Glamor stores.

For a modern twist on an old favorite, Wagenheim and Portner suggest — Crispy Potato Chicken, one of the recipes in the book, as a main course. It's healthy, and very easy to make.

You don't have to be Jewish to enjoy these two new exciting community cookbooks. Both contain lots of healthy salad, chicken and fish recipes, and tips that novice and seasoned cooks will appreciate.

Proceeds from the sale of "From Generation to Generation" will go toward worthy Sisterhood of Congregation Shaarey Zedek projects. Proceeds from "Still Fiddling in the Kitchen," will help support the many projects and programs of the National Council of Jewish Women, Greater Detroit Section.

Cooks share Passover recipes in community cookbooks

See related story on Taste front. If you're looking for something different to serve during Passover, here are some ideas from "Still Fiddling in the Kitchen," and "From Generation to Generation."

CRISPY POTATO CHICKEN

1 large potato, peeled
3-4 tablespoons Dijon mustard (during Passover substitute Passover French dressing for Dijon mustard)
1 large garlic clove, minced
2 whole chicken breasts, skinned and split
½-1 teaspoon olive oil or Italian dressing
Ground black pepper
Fresh parsley, rosemary or chives for garnish

Shred potato with grater or food processor. Transfer potato to bowl of ice water, let stand for 5 minutes.

Meanwhile in a small bowl, combine mustard (French dressing) and garlic, mix well. Rinse chicken and pat dry. Brush mustard (French dressing) mixture evenly on meaty side of chicken. Place chicken, bone side down, on foil lined baking sheet. Drain potatoes and dry thoroughly with paper towel. Place in a medium bowl and toss with oil or dressing to coat. Top each piece of chicken with ⅓ cup potato mixture in even layer to form skin. Sprinkle lightly with pepper. Bake in a 425 degree oven for 30-40 minutes or until chicken is no longer pink and potato shreds are golden. If potatoes are not browning, transfer pan to broiler and watch carefully. Garnish with fresh herbs. Serve immediately. Serves 4.

Recipe submitted by Karol Moxley in "Still Fiddling in the Kitchen."

SPINACH AND STRAWBERRY SALAD WITH LEMON DRESSING

1 (10-ounce) package fresh spinach, washed, drained and coarsely torn
1 pound fresh strawberries

Dressing:
¼ cup sugar
Juice of 1 large lemon
1 egg yolk
6 tablespoons vegetable oil

Chill washed and torn spinach. Arrange strawberries on top and chill. To make dressing, place sugar in mixing bowl. Add lemon juice and whisk. Add yolk, whisk. Add oil and continue to whisk until dressing is thick and creamy. Cover the dressing and refrigerate. Before serving, whisk dressing if necessary. Serve cold. Serves 6-8.

Recipe submitted by Ann Zousmer in "Still Fiddling in the Kitchen."

ISRAELI CHAROSET

1 apple peeled and cored
3 sliced bananas
10 pitted dates
½ cup nuts
Juice and rind of ½ lemon
Juice and rind of ½ orange
½ cup dry red wine
1 teaspoon cinnamon
matzo meal

Combine first six ingredients in food processor and process until finely chopped. Place in bowl and add wine and cinnamon. The mixture will be rather loose. Add enough matzo meal to achieve desired consistency. Serves 10-12.

Get acquainted with delicious, healthy Greek cuisine

See related story on Taste front. Recipes from "The Food and Wine of Greece," by Diane Kochilas (St. Martin's Press, N.Y. 1990)

MAROULOSALATA

Green salad
2 heads crisp romaine lettuce, shredded
5 to 6 scallions, peeled and chopped
½ cup finely chopped fresh dill
½ cup finely chopped fresh fennel
3 to 4 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon strong red wine vinegar, or more, to taste
Salt to taste

Shred, wash and drain lettuce well. In a large bowl, mix lettuce, scallions, dill and fennel together. Toss with oil and vinegar and season with salt. Serve cold or at room temperature. Serves 4.

SPINACH PIE

One box phyllo dough
oil for greasing pan
1½ pounds fresh spinach
¼ cup plus 3 tablespoons extra virgin olive oil
½ pound scallions (white part as well as 2 to 3 inches of green), finely chopped (about 1 cup)
1 large leek (white part as well as 2 to 3 inches of green), coarsely chopped
2 large bunches fresh dill, chopped, or 1 bunch fresh fennel and 1 bunch dill
1 large bunch parsley, chopped
1 egg, slightly beaten
¾ pound feta cheese, crumbled or chopped
2 tablespoons grated kefalotyri or Parmesan cheese
¾ teaspoon ground nutmeg
¼ teaspoon ground cumin
Salt and freshly ground pepper
1 egg yolk
2 tablespoons milk

Remove phyllo dough from refrigerator. Preheat oven to 375 degrees F. Lightly oil a 10½-inch pie plate.

Wash and chop spinach and squeeze dry thoroughly, then drain very well. Heat 2 tablespoons of the olive oil in a heavy skillet. Saute scallions and leek for 5 to 7 minutes over medium to low heat, until the green part of the leek is bright and softened and scallions are almost translucent. Add the spinach and stir until wilted, 5 to 7 minutes. The spinach will exude liquid. Remove spinach together with scallions and leeks to colander, and let drain completely. Set aside and cool.

In a large bowl, combine spinach, dill, parsley, scallions and leek. Add egg, ¼ cup olive oil, feta, kefalotyri (Parmesan cheese), spices, salt and pepper. Mix thoroughly, preferably with a wooden spoon.

Divide phyllo dough in half. On a lightly floured surface, cut dough to a circle about 12 inches in diameter. Carefully place in oiled pie plate. Brush with remaining 1 tablespoon olive oil. Spread spinach filling evenly over dough.

Cut remaining dough to a 12-inch circle. Carefully place over filling. Gently press top and bottom pastries together and cut away excess, leaving about ½ inch hanging over rim of pie plate.

Roll top and bottom pastries together toward inner edge of rim to form a border crust. Make four small incisions in center of pie with a sharp knife. Lightly beat egg yolk and milk and brush pie crust with the mixture. Bake for about 40 minutes, or until crust is golden brown. Serve warm or cold. Serves 6 to 8.

KALTSOUNIA CRETIS

Sweet cheese pastries from Crete
Dough:
2 to 2½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons butter
¼ cup vegetable shortening
2 eggs, at room temperature
2 teaspoons orange-blossom water (available at Greek or Middle Eastern markets)
1 to 2 tablespoons milk or water at room temperature
Filling:
2 cups farmer's cheese
1 egg
⅓ cup granulated sugar
2 tablespoons honey
½ to 1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon dried mint
Confectioners' sugar

To prepare dough: In a medium-sized bowl, sift together 2 cups flour, baking powder, sugar and salt. Cut in butter and shortening and work them in with a pastry blender or your fingers until the mixture is mealy. Add eggs and stir with a fork until a dough mass begins to form. Add orange-blossom water, then milk or water, but only enough to make a soft, elastic dough. Knead on a lightly floured surface until smooth and malleable, about 10 minutes, and set aside for 10 minutes or so, while you prepare the filling.

To prepare filling: In a medium-sized bowl, combine cheese, egg, sugar, honey, cinnamon, and mint and mix until all ingredients are well blended.

Lightly butter a large baking sheet. Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Break off a little piece of dough about the size of an unshelled walnut and roll it into a 4-inch circle or square. Fill the center of the dough with a rounded teaspoon of cheese filling. Fold over to form a package, folding each side in toward the center, but leaving the middle exposed. Repeat with remaining dough and filling. Bake for 20 to 25 minutes, until lightly browned. Remove and cool in pan. Sprinkle with confectioner's sugar, if desired. Store, covered in refrigerator. Yield — 2 to 2½ dozen

Here's an Easter bread recipe from Toula Patsalis of Kitchen Glamor.

AUTHENTIC GREEK EASTER BREAD

1 cup milk (heated to about 110 degrees F)
1 stick butter (½ cup)
2 packages dry active yeast
⅓ cup sugar
3 large eggs, slightly beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 tablespoons orange juice
2 tablespoons grated orange zest
2½ cups all-purpose flour
1½ teaspoons salt
2 cups high gluten flour
½ teaspoon Mahelti (available at Greek and Middle Eastern grocery stores, optional)
4 hard-cooked, cooled, red colored eggs
Glaze:
1 egg, beaten
2 tablespoons water
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon sesame seed

Making the sponge: In a large bowl pour warm milk, 1½ cups all-purpose flour, sugar and yeast. Mix and allow to stand covered until it begins to bubble, about 20 minutes.

Using a heavy duty mixer, pour sponge into the bowl and start machine. Add three large eggs slowly and mix until well incorporated. Add another cup of all-purpose flour and salt and beat until well mixed. Add orange rind, orange juice and vanilla. Mix until well incorporated.

Begin adding high gluten flour, ½ cup at a time, and mix until almost all the flour has been incorporated. Dough should be firm yet sticky enough to barely stick to your hand. Do not make it too dry or stiff.

Add butter, a little at a time until well mixed. Knead the dough by machine for three to four minutes or by hand for 10 minutes. Add Mahelti, if desired, mix well.

Making the bread: Place the dough into a large glass or ceramic bowl that has been oiled or buttered. Lay the dough into the bowl, slide it around, then turn upside down. This will completely grease the top and sides of the dough. Cover the dough with a warm, damp towel and allow it to sit undisturbed for one hour.

Punch the dough down, releasing all the air, and divide into three equal parts. Roll each part into a long rope about 24 inches long. Braid the rope together. Pinch the ends so they are sealed. Lay on a long cookie sheet covered with baking parchment paper, cover and allow to set until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour.

Gently lay the four red eggs in the braided bread, heavy side down, points up. Bake at 375 degrees for 15 minutes. Then brush with glaze.

To make glaze: Mix egg with water and sugar. Mix well. Brush over entire surface of bread and around the sides. Sprinkle with seasame seed. Place bread back in the 375 degree oven for 10 minutes. Place a sheet of foil over bread. Continue baking 15 minutes then remove.

If you plan to bake bread with the colored eggs. Make sure they are cooked, and cooled before inserting them in the bread to be baked.

Last year one person gave us everything she owned.

Without your donation we couldn't have accepted.

Please read the handwritten note on this page.

It's from a homeless woman. It was left at our door in the middle of the night along with two dogs, Two Face and Magic, pets this woman loved but could not care for. And could not keep.

Fortunately, we could care for Two Face and Magic. We took them in, gave them food and a warm place to sleep, and found them homes with the two families you see pictured above. This story had a happy ending.

But we get more and more cases like this each year. It's sad. And it gets worse. Some people don't care about animals as much as the woman who left this note.

Some people don't feed their pets. Some maliciously abuse animals in other ways.

Which is why we need your help.

Happy endings for animals like Two Face and Magic only begin with your donation. Please send us your check today. All we can ask is what a homeless person asked of us: help.

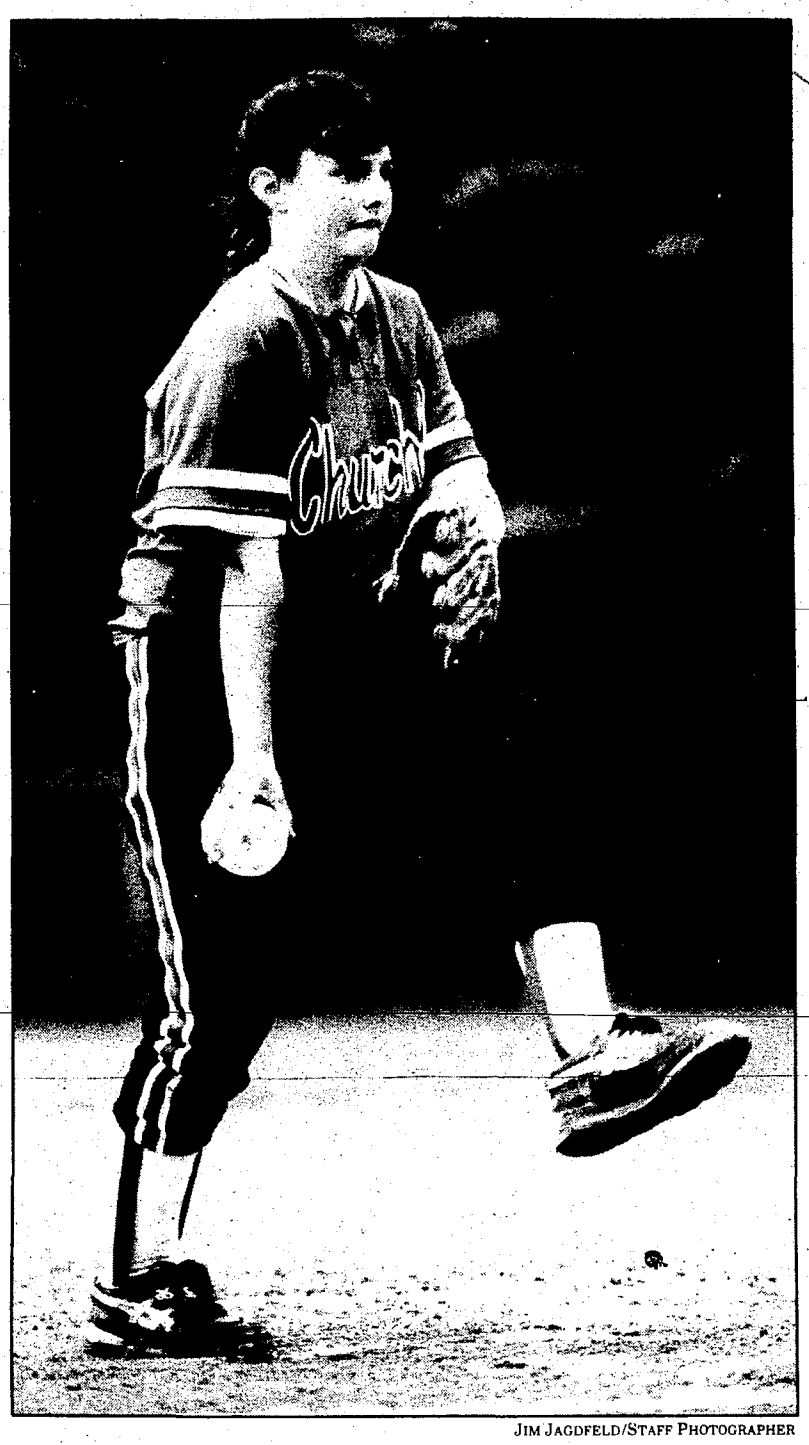
Canton still head of the class?



JIM JAGDFELD/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Arm strength: Karen Jose, a junior, returns for Livonia Churchill after going 16-5 a year ago.

Despite inclement spring weather, the high school girls softball season is scheduled to get underway this week. Plymouth Canton is still the team to beat.

BY BRAD EMONS
STAFF WRITER

It's no accident that the pitcher is designated No. 1 on official scorecards.

Pitching is the name of the game, especially in high school girls softball where Observerland boasts several top-notch hurlers.

The top area returnee without a doubt is Plymouth Canton senior Kelly Holmes, who led the Chiefs all the way to the 1992 state Class A championship game before losing to Jenison.

Holmes, who signed last fall with the University of Michigan, should make the Chiefs the team to beat once again.

The hard-throwing right-hander has a 53-9 career record with 635 total strikeouts.

Last season, Holmes went 23-3 with 289 strikeouts and only 47 walks in 178⅔ innings. Her earned run average was an astounding 0.35. She allowed only 48 hits.

"This kid can throw the softball," Canton coach Jim Arnold. "I tell other coaches they have to see our pitcher because she throws over 60 miles per hour. They can't believe anyone can throw that fast underhand."

The only other first-team All-Observer returnee is Holmes' teammate, Danni Mortiere, who hit .406. The senior returns at short.

Chief challengers

Canton could get challenges, however, from two Livonia schools, Ladywood and Churchill.

Ladywood, the Catholic League A-B Division runnerup a year ago (24-11 overall), returns senior right-hander Mary Jo Kelly, who won 23 of 33 decisions. The Blazers also have a new coach, ex-Bentley standout Lisa Parsons, who takes over for Kim Linenger.

All-Area first baseman Allison Brenny (.391) graduated, but six starters return, including Kelly, who can also swing the bat (.505 last year).

Churchill, meanwhile, was last season's surprise under the leadership of coach Dana Hardwidge.

The Chargers (17-6) got through the Class A district at Southfield before losing to Canton in the regionals at Temperance-Bedford.

Pitcher Karen Jose (16-5) gives the Chargers reason for optimism.

She is joined by senior catcher Chrissy Daly, one of the best receivers in the state.

Hardwidge, however, must find a replacement for shortstop Vicki Lucas, last year's area version of Cecil Fielder.

Before graduating and signing with Central Michigan, Lucas batted .447 with seven homers and 42 RBI.

"Vicki was such a large part of our offense and she was an experienced fielder," Hardwidge said. "We're going to have to hit singles back-to-back throughout the whole lineup, but hopefully we're stronger overall."

Rockets rebuilding

Westland John Glenn, 19-8 last year and Lakes Division champions in the Western Lakes Activities Association, lost two All-Area players to graduation in catcher Karen Olack (.384) and smooth-fielding shortstop Carrie Rachwal (.325).

John Glenn, Catholic Central contenders again

BY BRAD EMONS
STAFF WRITER

Of the galaxy of existing Observerland baseball teams, it's inevitable that Westland John Glenn and Redford Catholic Central will collide like two meteors.

Both teams soared to great heights last season.

CC held the state's No. 1 ranking until Glenn bumped the Shamrocks out in the semifinals of the Class A regional tournament, 6-5, at Temperance-Bedford.

The Rockets (17-8) then soared into the state semifinals before losing to Lapeer East, while CC (25-4) settled for a semi-early exit.

The previous season, Glenn won 23 of 25 games before being intercepted by eventual state champion Plymouth Salem.

Coach Norm Hoenes, now in his 27th season at Glenn, appears to have another talented club returning, as does John Salter at CC.

Graduation cost standout outfielder John Ward and pitcher Chris Kirkey, but Hoenes has a bulked up lineup that includes first-team All-Area pitcher Aaron Scheffer, who struck out 88 batters in 64⅓ innings; junior twins Bryan and Derek Besco; 6-foot-4, 235-pound first baseman Mike Bint, along with left-handed hurler Greg Nesbitt.

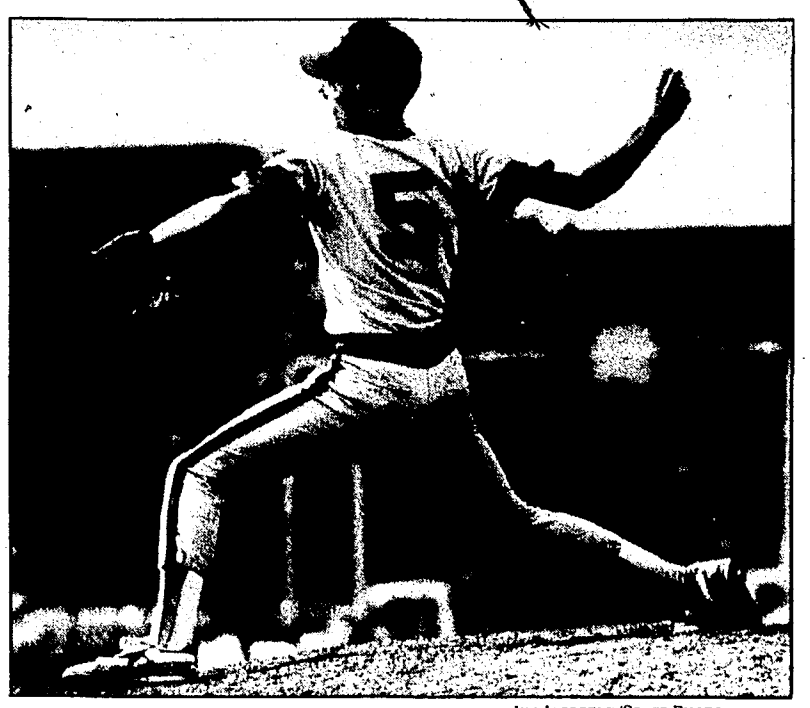
Despite the recent snow, Hoenes can't hide his optimism for launching the season.

"We've got some power," he said. "If the juniors step up and do the job, we'll be strong."

CC riding high

Salter, meanwhile, lost several key players from a year ago, including do-it-all pitcher/fielder Scott Kapla, a hard-throwing right-hander now at Eastern Michigan University.

Kapla, who came on in relief last week to beat Michigan, will be missed along with first-team All-Area pick Dan Gusoff and second-teamer Paul Kuhn.



JIM JAGDFELD/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Rocket man: Aaron Scheffer, a senior, gives perennial baseball power Westland John Glenn a stopper on the mound.

Pitching is a question mark, but 6-5 senior right-hander Brian Paluk could emerge as the ace of the staff along with Dave Susalla.

The two combined for an 8-1 record last season.

"We have some good arms, we just lack experience," said Salter, who has one state title to his credit.

CC will have its power sticks in the lineup too with EMU signee Brian Hicks, the catcher, returning after clubbing nine homers a year ago. Aaron Babicz, an All-State football lineman, also provides power at first base.

Livonia outlook

Who can challenge Glenn and CC?

Livonia schools Churchill, Franklin and Stevenson, simply put, are looking for improvement.

Churchill (8-7), defending city champs, returns pitcher/infielder Mark Rutherford, another EMU signee. The second-team All-Area selection is one of six senior returnees entering their third varsity season with the Chargers.

Franklin (9-12) is going with youth. The Patriots are also scrambling to find a replacement for second-team All-Area catcher Jeff Schaffer.

The heir apparent, junior Delano Voletti, transferred to Dearborn Divine Child.

Stevenson (4-17) hopes that first-year coach Mike Keller, who replaces the retired Richard DeVries, will work his magic on the Spartans.

Keller, a Churchill grad, is a long-time summer sandlot coach in the Livonia Collegiate League. He led Walter's Appliance to the brink of prestigious All-American Amateur Baseball last summer before losing to New Orleans in the title game in Johnstown, Pa.

Stevenson's top returnee is senior Matt Cogswell, a smooth fielding first baseman who will also pitch.

Zebras could contend

Wayne Memorial (13-8), one game out of first last year in the Wolverine A League, could challenge once again if things fall into place.

Eric Bates, a first-team All-Area infielder, will be missed along with pitcher Jason Wetmore, but senior speedster Jeff Tapp returns as does 6-5 junior first baseman Jason Overton.

In the Metro Conference, Lutheran High Westland joins Livonia Clarenceville in the West Division.

The Warriors (14-8) lost standout catcher Jason Zielinski, but return four starters.

Clarenceville (9-7) coach Mark McDonald is also excited about the season, even though second-team All-Area infielder Tony Malinowski is gone.

Senior shortstop Carl Holston, who hit .320 a year ago, is a plus for the Trojans along with junior pitcher Mark Juncaj and junior outfielder Mark Skrelja (transfer from Ferndale).

Westland Huron Valley Lutheran (15-4) remains in the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference with four starters returning including senior pitcher/shortstop Doug Hartley, the league MVP who hit .512 with three homers.

Olack is now at Henry Ford Community College, while Rachwal is playing for Saginaw Valley State.

Pitcher Cathy Mruk (17-6) also graduated, so junior hurler Lynn Little (2-0 in 1992) must pick up the slack for coach Linda Jimenez.

Livonia Franklin coach Joe Epstein, who has one state Class A title to his credit and pair of runnerup finishes, hopes to improve on last year's disappointing 6-18 overall record.

The Patriots will rely on senior hurler Michelle Averill and rising sophomore Becky Jansen.

Livonia Stevenson, meanwhile, hopes to improve on last year's 5-12 record under new coach Art Anselm, who moves over to the Spartans' program from Redford Bishop Borgess. Two freshman hurlers, Marie Wilson and Laura Krol, will battle for the mound position, along with junior Joanne Catania.

Metro contenders

Young pitchers will also be the focus for two area Metro Conference schools.

Lutheran High Westland, defending Michigan Independent Athletic Conference champs, could contend in the Metro if junior Shannon Wasil bounces back from knee surgery. She sat out her sophomore season.

"She pitched well until we lost her as a freshman," Lutheran Westland coach Ron Gentz said.

Livonia Clarenceville could also contend if coach Wendy Kellehan can get consistency from sophomores Wendy Roy and Pam Inzano, along with senior Jodi Graham.

Wayne Memorial, 2-12 last year in the Wolverine A League, may see progress if either junior Erica Cox or JV pitcher Shahna Allan come through.

See capsule summaries.

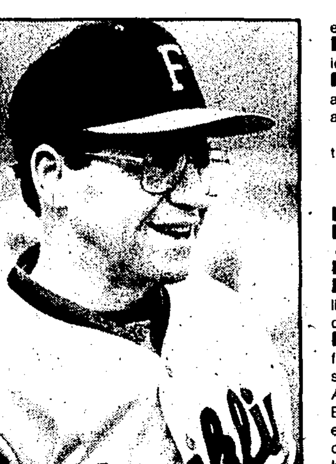
"We'll have to bunt, run, hit and steal . . . finesse baseball. We don't have anybody that's going to power the ball out of the park. We'll have to play good solid defense, hang in and win the close games."



Jim Karoub

Mayflower Lanes hails senior talent

10-PIN ALLEY

AL HARRISON

The winners of the first annual East-West Seniors Four-Man Challenge received their awards last Friday at Mayflower Lanes in Redford

The event was held Jan. 25 at Mayflower and Jan. 27 at Ark Sterling in Sterling Heights. The West team prevailed as reported earlier in this column.

John Gavie made the presentations — a plaque for the winners and a jacket for each member of the winning team, courtesy of Dave Bernhardt, owner of 2-in-1 Turbo Grips.

Bernhardt was a sponsor of the tournament and is a staunch supporter of senior bowling. Senior citizens have become a significant part in the growth of the sport, as Americans are more health conscious than ever.

One indication of the strength of senior bowlers is that they are now forming a Seniors Classic league which will bowl at Mayflower Lanes beginning next fall. I expect this to be the greatest senior bowling league in the nation.

Ten teams have already signed up for the Seniors Classic. For more details, call Mayflower at 937-8420.

■ How about all those 300 games at Merri Bowl last week?

The Senior House league produced two of them on Wednesday from Randy Smith (247-300-257/904) and Jim Jesson (202-300-279/781), while Gordie Hutchinson settled for a mere 299. In addition to the above scores, Fred Young recorded a 808 series with games of 277-245-286.

Mark Hefner of the Head Pins league rolled a 300 last Saturday and totaled a 755 series.

At Super Bowl Lanes in Canton, Ray Richardson and Rob Green both fired 300s in the Wednesday Morning Men's League. Marc Wadsworth rolled a 300 in the Saturday Night Live league at Wonderland Lanes in Livonia.

Bowl One Lanes in Troy featured a 300 game by Ralph Petty in the Budweiser Trio League, while Bruce Alexander shot 300 in the Andiamo Classic.

Yves Szmansky bowled a 300 at Westland's Town n' Country Lanes while competing in the Wednesday Merchants League.

LINDA BACHRACK

Furry friends for fussy folks

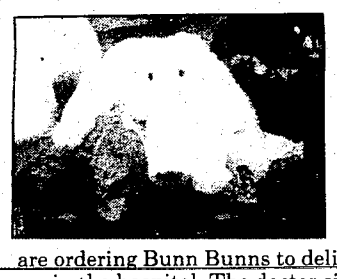
Remember when you whispered all of your secrets into the well-rubbed ear of your best-loved friend? I'm referring to the lovable, furry friend of your childhood — the floppy-eared bunny or the cuddly bear. That friend, a constant companion, was chosen for his special personality, one that only you could imagine.

Phebe Phillips of Dallas still cherishes her favorite stuffed friend, "Bunny," and it was he who inspired her to create and design a line of plush toys for other young-at-hearts. Phillips was in Jacobson's stores recently to present her hand-hewn keepsakes.

The animals, all with distinct personalities, are unusual in that they sport soft pink Ultrasuede noses, individually designed collars and a trademark suede foot that Phillips signs with her name and the animal's name. There's also room for a dedication to the lucky recipient of this timeless gift.

Phillips' love of literature and poetry is obvious in the creative names she gives to each of the 50-plus animals in the collection. "Rumpus Bear — Rumpus ate too many honey waffles," thus his pudgy tummy and sweet, round face. "Tucker's Tarry, the nine-life fairy" is the white kitty with eyes of different colors, the good luck cat. "Ra-Bunzel Rebunny" is the glamourous long-eared white rabbit on whose foot Phillips once inscribed, "Will you marry me?" for an imaginative customer.

Doctors' choice



The angelic little "Bunn Bunn" would nestle perfectly in an Easter basket or make a delightful newborn gift. Some thoughtful OB-Gyn offices are ordering Bunn Bunns to deliver to new mothers in the hospital. The doctor signs the suede foot with the date and baby's name.

Though 80 percent of her customers are adults, "kids animate the animals for me," says Phillips. Ashley Mirch, a second-grader at Walnut Lake Elementary School in West Bloomfield, was fascinated by the whimsical furry friends casually draped on tables and chairs at Jacobson's Birmingham store. Her favorite? "Butter Bear Harry, the heart-warming fairy. I love his color and his wings," she said. "You wouldn't want to spill pop on him, he's too special," she added, already sounding as if he was a part of her family.

Rebecca Zorn of Marlette, Mich., was thinking ahead when she fell in love with, and bought, "Forest Bear" for her granddaughter, Bronte Stewart. His foot was signed, "Christmas 1993." The "hunter in the woods" is one of the most popular bears with his shaggy brown fur and collar of autumn leaves. "My daughter collects dolls. Maybe this will be the first of a bear collection," Zorn said.

Before she could leave the enchanting assemblage of creatures, Zorn added "Bunn Ole Coot Laurence" to her purchase. Laurence is the "thinker of the wisest thoughts" and Zorn thought him appropriate for her sister's 50th birthday. She dedicated him "to the child within."

Capturing childhood

"Everyone wants to capture something in childhood. These animals create a warmth," says Phillips. And judging by the reaction one late afternoon at Jacobson's, those sentiments are shared by many. This collection is exclusive to Jacobson's in the Detroit area. A catalog will be available in the store and every animal can be personalized. Prices range from $60-$120.

Speaking of bunnies, let's not ignore the granddaddy of storybook hares, Beatrix Potter's Peter Rabbit, who celebrates his 100th birthday this year. Peter's personality, so exquisitely illustrated in Potter's stories, is captured in porcelain figurines by Royal Albert for Royal Doulton.

The most recent introductions to the collection include "Miss Dormouse," "Pigling Eats Porridge" and "Christmas Stocking." See these pieces along with Peter, his siblings Flopsy, Mospsy and Cottontail, and their forest of friends at Hudson's stores in the fine china department. Most are priced at $29.50.

Stylish hats top off spring fashion

They're baaack. But some would argue they've never been gone. Wearing a hat is always in vogue, but especially so at Easter time.

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO
STAFF WRITER

There was a time when the well-dressed woman would not leave home without a chic hat and matching gloves; 1940 to 1960 to be exact.

Now, here in 1993, designers are suggesting a return to that look. The well-stocked fashion accessory aisles of every department store prove it.

"We've got a bigger and better selection of hats than we ever had before," said Heidi King of Rochester Hills, a department manager at J.C. Penney. "This spring we're featuring hats with polka dots, nautical-looking hats in navy and white, roller hats, and the vintage wide brims, trimmed in florals. The baseball cap look is very strong in casuals.

"Gloves are coming back too. They really complete an outfit. We've got all lengths and many different colors. We sell a lot of gloves for special occasions, proms and weddings."

Penney's hats are priced between $25 and $45, depending on the style and designer.

New York chapeau designer B. Michael was in town last week to promote his toppers at Jacobson's.

"All the designers are showing them," he said, describing the growing national figures in millinery sales. "Hats are a new accessory for a new generation. Thirty-something young people are discovering hats can be an exciting addition to their wardrobe. And for the woman for whom fashion is a law, the woman who takes that extra minute to put the hat on, the selection has never been greater."

Fewer hatmakers

B. Michael bemoaned the fact that the number of hatmaking companies in the United States has dropped from more than 100 to a dozen through the years. A graduate of the Fashion Institute of Technology, he designs for the Aldo Hat Corp., previously designing for Adolfo II, Mr. John and Canadian Hat in Montreal.

"I'm more taken with silhouette than trim, drawing on everything in the world, including building contours, for my inspiration for hat designs," he said.

B. Michael said hat materials are standard with designers bringing new executions to old favorites. He said anyone can wear a hat. The trick is to find the appropriate hat for an outfit.

"To keep a hat on, use a hat pin and make sure it's the proper size," he said.

B. Michael said hat shopping should be fun. He urged the trial of many different styles to find the one that works.

Season's color gears shift into neutral

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO
STAFF WRITER

Uh oh.

Something's un-Vogue-ably wrong this season.

Spring fashions are usually about color as winter-weary greens and browns get pushed to the back of the closet.

But not this year.

Neutrals, defined in Webster's Dictionary as having little or no decided color are here.

In fact, they're everywhere along our malls and main streets.

Haute couture designers call it "muted tones of oatmeal." To everyone else it's ivory, cream, butter, banana, eggshell or just plain beige.

"Well at least most everyone can wear it," said Peg Treacy, president of Churchill Associates, an imaging consulting firm in Birmingham. "Neutrals are classics, although very cream of wheat as my dad used to say. That meant you can't get too excited or emotional about it."

Beige is good fashion news to Judith Saunders of Plymouth, who loves to shop along that town's Main Street.

"I've always loved the color," she said. "It's so rich looking. I like to wear beige, but I've found that as I get older it makes me look washed out."

Buyer of beige

Donald Foreman, who does most of his shopping at the Livonia Mall, likes beige, too.

"I'm no fashion authority," he said. "But I know I buy a lot of beige shirts and jackets and I wear 'em."

Treacy has been researching the psychology of color for the past 20 years.

Tel-Twelve mall celebrates 25th anniversary

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO
STAFF WRITER

Play ball. Slide into savings.

Sure, the Tigers won the World Series in 1968. But two other events mark that year for Detroiters as well.

In 1968, two major shopping centers opened for business: the Oakland Mall in Troy and the Tel-Twelve Mall in Southfield.

Tel-Twelve is celebrating its 25 years in business. Oakland Mall is not.

In fact, it's the '68 Tigers who will appear at Tel-Twelve Mall in a month-long salute to major league baseball.

"We're very excited about our anniversary plans," said Tel-Twelve marketing director Janet VanMaldeghem. "Beginning Thursday, April 8, through April 10, a fun-filled hands-on baseball exhibit will go up in the mall's center court."

The Great American Pastime will recreate a baseball park complete with games of skill and sports memorabilia. Fans can test their pitching skill and throw three strikes to win a prize in the big league bullpen hosted by an animatronic replica of legendary announcer Mel Allen.

Co-sponsored by Joe Panian Chevrolet in Southfield, the exhibit also provides the chance for shoppers to be photographed in their favorite teams' uniforms and have a special stat-card made.

And they have the chance to win a drawing for a Chevy Camaro Z28.

"Stores shouldn't buy a piece here, a piece there," he said. "They need a decent representation of a designer's line so the designer can establish a following. If a woman wants a navy hat, she needs to see 10 different navy hats within a given price range — never have a dozen of the same hat on the floor or it doesn't look special."

Mertize Higgins has been making hats for Detroit-area women for 40 years. She and her daughter, Audrey Hawkins, continue the tradition from their factory showroom on Woodward between Canfield and Willis.

Not just for church

"Church ladies have always been our customers, especially through the '60s and '70s when hats weren't so popular," said Hawkins. " . . . I noticed our business picking up about three years ago. Now things are really hopping."

Hawkins said all Mertize hats are made by hand, fashioned by a small group of milliners who charge between $45 to $250 per hat. Most hats sell for $65-$75.

"We make Detroit councilwoman Maryann Mahaffey's hats, and we made the St. Patrick's Day hat councilman Jack Kelley is wearing," she said. They also teach classes in hatmaking at Marygrove College and sell hatmakers' supplies. The women welcome inquiries at 831-1660. Their leather hats may soon be seen at boutiques in Royal Oak and Trapper's Alley.

Fashion expert Jane Proctor writes in "Clothes Sense" that a hat's brim should never be wider than the wearer's shoulders.

"Pay attention to the proportions of a hat," she writes. "Shape outweighs decoration. The crown should fit accurately so it's the brim or trim that balances your body. If you are big and want a small hat, choose one with veiling or decoration to add width. If you are small, don't attempt too big a brim or you'll look swamped."

More Proctor hat tips:

- When buying a hat, get the silhouette right first. Next, worry about trim or lack of it.
- Avoid straw hats with green brims. The straw filters light and its color is reflected on the face.
- Practice wearing a hat. Get used to its movements. Discover its best angle, reaction to wind and jostle. Then wear it with total confidence.
- Rub dry bread or fine sandpaper over a felt hat to lift marks.
- Always view a hat in a full-length mirror to gauge total silhouette. Hats should balance neckline, waistline and hem.
- Many inexpensive hats sold in large chain stores are ruined by cheap and gaudy trims. Remove them to reveal classic shapes.

World War II anniversary events planned

The Livonia-based Trailblazers Association and the 70th Division (Training) are hosting a series of events during the weekend of July 17-18 to commemorate the 50th anniversary of World War II.

Included in these events are ceremonies and military displays scheduled for Saturday, July 17, at Ford Athletic Park and a dinner dance that evening at Burton Manor.

The 70th Division (Training) is an Army Reserve Command consisting of 3,000 men and women serving in Livonia and at other Army Reserve Centers in Michigan and Indiana.

The division's predecessor, the 70th Infantry Division, was formed during World War II and fought in Europe.

For more information on the activities, call 458-6428.

"Studies have shown that if left alone, without any influence from the fashion world, people instinctively pick as their favorite colors, the colors that look best on them," she said. "After all, each of us is given a color package at birth. That's the color of our eyes, hair and skin."

Color expert Treacy said the colors we wear provoke a reaction in others. The warm colors — reds, oranges and yellows — cause blood pressure, heartbeat and rate of respiration to rise. Cool colors like blues, greens and violets, have a calming effect.

Color and culture

"There are also cultural and ethnic differences in color," she said. "In some cultures males wear purple as a symbol of power and authority. In others, men avoid wearing purple. Throughout history important figures always wore commanding colors. The executioner wore black. Kings wore purple and red. Emperors wore gold."

Treacy said there are even color schemes that appeal to people in different economic backgrounds.

"Studies have shown that the upper 3 percent of our society prefer forest green and the gray-burgundy-mauve combination," she said. "That's why so many banks like gray and mauve in their trust departments."

The fashion industry is finally listening to the people, said Joyce Knudsen, of Bloomfield Hills, president of The ImageMaker Inc. New York is making clothes in color tones that appeal to a diversified community.

Color analysts agree that the colors we wear indicate mood and character. In The Color Rainbow by fashion writer Jane Proctor, colors can be a key to personality:

- Red: Related to dominance and energy. Reveals impulsiveness and desire to succeed in love and life.
- Brown: Indicates a nature that seeks emotional security.
- Blue: Tranquil and reserved character.
- Green: Suggests nature that is egotistical and proud. Wants to impress but is afraid to give way for fear of losing control.
- Yellow: Generally optimistic and sympathetic, without too many hang-ups.
- Black: A stubborn character, likely to fly in the face of fate. One often out of step with others. Feels misunderstood.
- Grey: Prefers the sidelines. Remains emotionally uncommitted.
- Beige: Suggests credibility. Preference for order, simplicity. Very approachable.

day, April 18, we will have a mall-wide display looking at ads and pictures from our stores in 1968 to the present," VanMaldeghem said. "Old photos will show the city and center as it was in 1968, with lots of surrounding farmland."

Part of that display features life-size portraits of the 1968 Tigers complete with their stats. At 6 a.m. Wednesday, WCSX will broadcast their morning show live from the mall with guests Gates Brown and Willie Horton. At 11 a.m., Eli Zaret and Denny McLain will tape their sports talk show from the mall. They'll interview Willie Horton and Mickey Lolich.

What would a salute to baseball be without a baseball card show?

Traders and collectors will have their fill at a supershow from April 15 to 18 throughout the mall. Highlights of the show include autograph sessions with pinch-hitter Gates Brown 4-6 p.m. on April 15, Jim Northrup 2-4 p.m. and Willie Horton 5-7 p.m. on April 16, Al Kaline 1-3 p.m. and Mickey Lolich 4-6 p.m. on April 17, Mickey Stanley noon to 2 p.m. and Denny McClain 2:30-4:30 p.m. on April 18.
