WESTLAND'S finest want people to know that they don't give eigarettes to their prisoners. It seems that someone impersonating a police officer "purchased" 33 cartons of cigarettes from a Westland party store with a stolen check.

Police said the suspect, described as a light-skinned black man in his 30s and 5 feet 10 inches tall, showed a silver badge to the store employee. He said he was buying cigarettes for prisoners.

Westland police cautioned store employees to check closely the identification of anyone claiming to be a police officer.

"Police departments don't operate in that manner and don't Issue a personal check," Westland Police Sgt. Leonard Goodlesky said. "And we don't furnish cigarettes to MOVING ON are two_ administrators in the Wayne-Westland school district. Dr. Gary Matsche, executive director of employee relations in the district, is leaving to take over the belm as superintendent of Lincoln Park Public Schools. Also leaving is David Bolitho, assistant principal at John Glenn High School, who is known, among other things, for his work on the annual Glenn Gras. "It's ironic that these are both two former students who went to college, returned to us and now are leaving at the same time," Wayne-Westland Superintendent Timothy Dver said.

FOUR WESTLAND men were among a class of 200 Masons receiving Scottish Rite Freemasonry's 32nd Degree at the semiannual reunion at the Detroit Masonic Temple. The four were Bert D. Dunford Jr., Ernest R. Elliott, Timothy M. Goddard and James K. Harmount.

FOUR LOCAL students are among 67 high school graduates to receive the regents scholarship given by Eastern Michigan University. Receiving the $1,200 award are Brian Boston of Churchill High School, Anud M. Patel of John Glenn High, and Tanya Davis and Linda Reno, both of Wayne Memorial High.

The scholarship, the most prestigious awarded by the university, is given to recipients who must have a minimum 3.75 grade point average and test scores of 24 on the American College Test or 1,050 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test. The scholarship is renewable if a 3.5 grade point average is maintained by the students.

ALSO AWARDING scholarships recently was Oakland University, which named Anne Hooper of Franklin High School as winger of $1,000 in the Honors College Scholarship Competition. Students were chosen on the basis of an essay, high school records and national test scores.

ANOTHER Franklin High School student, Dawn Kelley, also made news recently with her performance on the algebra final exam given at Franklin for the past three years, Kelley's score was the highest ever received since the test was first given.

Educators assess district's quality

By Sandra Armbruster

The Wayne-Westland school district didn't need to be shocked into action by . a report from the National Commission on Excellence in Education, which said the poor quality of education in the United States places this nation at risk.

"We already had initiated changes, so there was no need for a big reaction," explained Dr. Clarice Stafford, assistant superintendent for curriculum in the district, which also includes a portion of Canton Township. From buying textbooks to reviewing achievement test scores, the Wayne--Westland school community began addressing concerns about educational Flag sales business is

It's the season when many homeowners and businesses see red - and white and blue, too, up'n'down

The time of the year between Memorial Day and the Fourth of July is often the busiest for flag businesses. But 1983 may not be a banner year for all of them.

"Patriotism goes up and down," said Bernie Solovey, owner of Sign-A-Rama in Garden City. "People like myself, the 'old-timers' from World War II, have it out there all the time. But if you look at maybe 50 homes, you might see 10 of them that have the flag."

"I think things are better for us this Ayear," said George Koehler, owner of Maggie and Me in Westland. "Partly because of the upturn in the economy, and I think that perhaps when things are tough people get back to basics, the country and family type of things, and are a little more patriotic."

The most popular size flags measure three-by-five. Other sizes include fourby-five, six-by-10 and 12-by-18. The most requests come for American and state flags.

PEOPLE OFTEN buy flags because they want it as a gift or because their family always had one, the business-

Flag sales this year have been the same as other years, Solovey said. He said that may be due to how often a flag is used and how durable it is.

"The type of flag I sell is of very high quality, not what the average homeowner would use, It's more for schools and buildings," Solovey said. "The average person only flies, it on holidays, so you don't need a flag of high quality.

People buy them as gifts or if they want a real high quality-type flag, because the stars are embroidered onto the flag."

Seniors plan summer treks

Senior citizens of the community are invited to take part in a cruise of Lake St. Clair and a polka-Western festival.

The two-hour cruise will take place Thursday, July 28. It will feature a cold buffet, cash bar, dancing, sightseeing and shopping in Sarnia, at a cost of $26.

The festival is scheduled for Tuesday, Aug. 16, in Frankenmuth. It will feature a 35-piece youth band direct from Germany, morning shopping, a chicken dinner, dancing, singing and ethnic foods. Cost for the event is also

That concern went beyond books and test scores. First, a task force on elementary education was appointed. With that project nearing completion, a task force on secondary (junior and senior high) schools was appointed in May 1981.

"We developed a five-year plan, and we've been making good progress in stabilizing and gradually improving what we're doing," Stafford said.

THAT PLAN includes a list of goals and accompanying objectives designed to meet those goals. It was developed after a long series of meetings with staff in schools throughout the district and offers specific suggestions to teachers on how goals can be achieved.

But the plan is just that - a flexible commission had to say. approach to improving education without "lock-step guidelines," Stafford said. She added that completion of the planned goals is two to three years

"If you want change - permanent, years," she said. .

"Start with a dream, what you think should be done and set goals. It takes a long time to internalize (the goals), and it's important that all are geared toward working toward the same was introduced to provide "a more rigorous emphasis on academic achievement." the educators added, and the grading criteria in secondary schools is being established to add validity to letter grades.

"Each teacher must be careful about clarifying what criteria is established and make it known to the kids." Stafford said. "It's really important to communicate that to the parents so there is no big surprise."

Stafford emphasized that the purpose of grades is learning, not just giving a grade.,

RENEWED EMPHASIS on the basics will require "more effective use of the existing school day, a longer school day or a lengthened school year," according to the educators.

That means dealing with the economics of negotiations, but in the meantime, they said that codes of conduct and attendance and criteria for promoting students are firm and con-

Particular attention has been paid to classroom management and the organization of the school day. Stafford explained that the less time teachers have to spend on management things like paper work, the more time they have for students.

"There is a significant range from classroom to classroom," she added. "I'm saying I think we can improve."

TEACHERS' evaluations also have been under review in Wayne-Westland. A formal observation and written evaluation every three years is now required, and building administrators are being trained in how to conduct the evaluations.

- Stafford and Dyer also call for negotiating the issue of teachers being both qualified and certified. That would have an impact on teachers who are bumped in the layoff process, with teachers being placed according to their major academic areas of study.

the commission's report. She said that the things listed for implementation don't insure that students will be taught to meet the goal.

She added that areas missing from the commission's report are applied curriculum, in which students use what they've learned, and interdisciplinary curriculum.

"Too many things are in isolation (in the report)," she said. "Students have to be given projects that they can worktogether on and draw application from other classes."

IN THE summary of a report Stafford and Dyer submitted to the board, the two educators call for some hard thinking on what should be the role of education in the district.

"During the last 20 years, society has required schools to address the issues of desegregation, hot lunches, bilingual education, the handicapped, drive education, expanded athletic programs.

Stafford has some reservations about single-interest pressure groups and many other issues beyond the basic academic program," they said,

"Time is a resource. There, it is critical to determine the priorities of the schools in-order to allocate our resources - time, space, people and materials - to what we believe is important. We do not necessarily have to rubber stamp all of the recommendations.

"We need to decide what is valid and what, is feasible in the Wayne-Westland Community Schools."

· Stafford said that the district already has begun that process with parent advisory committees and PTA groups in individual schools, as well as . with an advisory group of parents that has met periodically with Dyer during the past year.

One big event scheduled in November during American Education Week will be a series of school/home conferences in which the Area Council PTA will ask for cooperation and input in those areas.

Borg faces community work, ail sentence in ball death

A youth convicted in the death of a Westland motorist who was struck by a bowling ball is scheduled to begin a six-month term at the Detroit House of Corrections Tuesday as part of his sentence.

Wayne County Circuit Judge_Richard Kaufman handed down a seven-part sentence to the youth, 19-year-old Charles Jo--seph Borg Jr. of Wayne, last Wednesday. The sentence includes civic work and payment of $2,400 in court costs.

A letter from the family of the late Thomas Hart, read by Kaufman last Wednesday, suggested that Borg-spend three or four years doing civic work.

Hart, 30, died of massive head injuries

Dec. 5. The day before, a 14-pound bowling ball had crashed through the windshield of the-car-in-which he and his wife, Linda, were riding and struck Hart in the head.

Borg, who pleaded gullty to involuntary manslaughter in the death, said he dropped the ball out the window of the car-in which he was riding to get rid of it.

UNDER KAUFMAN'S sentence, after the six-month term, Borg will spend five hours a week for two years working at the Tri-City Recreational Program, an organization based in Westland that provides recreation for physically and mentally handle capped persons. -

SAFETY FOR THE ELDERLY

A previous column dealt with measures to make steirs safe for the elderly. Today's discussion will look at other areas where changes for seniors can provide them safety from falls. Some measures are obvious; Get throw rugs. off the floor. Such ruge slide unexpectedly and the elderly often cannot adjust their balance to avoid a fall. Check out the bathroom: A permanent rubber strip-mat in the tub is a necessity. Hand ralls at a height appropriate for the individual are desirable as is a container that effectively prevents soap from falling to the floor. If the older person uses a cane, check its base. A cane that looks like a walking stick is: attractive but dangerous. An effective cane should have a large rubber tip or a tripod base, its handle should reach to the user's walstilne.

Keep alert to potential hazards in the eldery's nome. Preventing an accident involves far less of your effort than assisting after a fall has. occurred:

SENSATIONAL SUMMER FRUIT SALADS FROM THE CALIFORNIA COUNTRYSIDE

The state of California is a land of contrast and variety... offering sunny beaches, majestic redwood forests and fields, orchards and groves brimming with a bounty of fresh produce.

Agriculture in the Golden State is considered one of the most diversified in the world with no one commodity dominating the state's farm economy. California leads the nation by a wide margin in the production of some 50 commercial crop and livestock commodities.

California-raised fruits and nuts account for more than 40 percent of the nation's cash farm receipts and vegetables account for about one third. Fruit, nut and vegetable crops cover more than 9 million acres of precious California countryside!

Among California's top commercial fruit and vegetable commodities are avocados, Bartlett pears, iceberg lettuce, nectarines, peaches and plums - all in season this summer, making them ideal forrefreshing warm-weather meals. Not only do they perk up the simplest of dishes with unique flavor and color combinations, they also supply essential nutrients and fiber. They're all naturally low in sodium and of course, direct from the farm... unprocessed, unmilled and unspoiled.

Whether you have a special love for appetizers, salads, entrees or desserts, let these fresh fruits and vegetables from California takecenter stage this summer. Begin an elegant sit-down dinner with an equally elegant first course - California Prawn and Fruit Salad. Simply arrange steamed prawns, Bartlett pear and avocado slices on crisp iceberg lettuce wedges and drizzle a tangy mustard dressing over all.

Instead of the usual chef's salad fare for your next luncheon gathering please your guests with a quick-to-fix Calypso Salad. Fill Bartlett pear and avocado halves with a tuna salad mixture and perch them around a mound of shredded iceberg lettuce. Top with a coforful arrangement of plum and peach slices and serve with a tangy plum dressing...a light and lovely meal!

Crazy about Mexican food, but ready for a new twist? Dazzle your family or friends with a fruity Tostada Salad dinner. Top crispy tortillas with shredded iceberg lettuce and cooked chicken. Arrange juicy peach slices over all and finish with a spoonful of creamy smooth avocado-dressing and a dollop of sour cream. Offer some taco sauce for those who'd like to "zip up" their tostada and be sure to have enough of everything on hand for second helpings!

Light and refreshing desserts are a must for hot days and nights and here's one that's sure to bring the temperature down: Decoratively arrange Bartlett pear and plum wedges and avocado chunks over crunchy iceberg lettuce slices and top with scoops of super cold nectarine ice. It's that easy and that delicious!

Take a vacation from the hot stove and reap the flavorful colorful and nutritional benefits of the California countryside. Summertime fruit salads never looked or tasted so good!

Celebrate National Ice Cream Week with a special pie

Sunday marks the beginning of National Ice Cream Week (July 10-16) and in the heat of summer it is a timely opportunity to celebrate one of America's favorite desserts.

Not only does ice cream taste good, it contains nutrients such as Vitamin A, riboflavin and thiamine that are good for you.

You can observe the occasion by going out and buying an ice cream cone (vanilla is still the most popular flavor, followed by chocolate, neapolitan, chocolate chip and strawberry) or you can create your own treats with the help of the chefs at Schuler's Restaurant & Pub in West Bloomfield and Rochester.

They created the following recipes which look as good as they taste.

PEPPERMINT RIBBON

ICE CREAM PIE Crust: 11/4 cups chocolate wafers 1/2 cup melted batter

Crush chocoate wafers fine. Combine chocolate wafers and melted butter. Butter a 9-inch pie tin. Place wafer mixture in pie tin and pat bottom and sides with mixture until firm. Yield: one 9-inch pie. The pie crust may be made a day ahead.

Filling:

2 lbs 6 oz peppermint ice cream 1 cup hot fudgé

Put 1 lb., 3 oz. layer of peppermint stick ice cream on bottom of ple shell. Spread 1 cup of fudge on top of peppermint ice cream. Place remainder of peppermint ice cream on top of hot fudge. Ice cream should be higer in middle of tin and taper to edge of tin. Put in freezer to harden.

Meringue topping:

2 egg whites -1/2 tsp-vanilla extract-

1/4 tsp cream of tartar 1/3 cup sugar

In a medium bowl, beat egg whites, vanilla and cream of tartar with electric mixer on high speed until soft peaks form. Gradually add sugar, beating until stiff peaks form. Spread stiff meringue all over and around peppermint ice cream pie, covering entire surface. With rubber spatula, peak meringue. Pre-heat over to 350°. Place meringued pie into oven on a 1-inch thick piece of board for browning the meringue - approximately 15-30 seconds. Put in freezer immediately upon taking out of oven.

Pie topping: I cup fudge 3 thsp hot coffee

Heat hot fudge in double boiler. Add 3 tablespoons of hot coffee and mix well. Keep warm.

When ready to serve, remove frozen pie from ting place on cutting board; cut with large knife. Cut in 8 pieces. Ladle hot fudge over each piece of pie.

LEMON ICE CREAM PIE

11/4 cups chocolate crumbs 1/2 cup melted margarine

Filling: 2 lbs 8 oz lemon ice cream

Combine chocolate crumbs and margarine. Pat into a 9-inch buttered pie tin. Chill. Mound lemon ice cream into crust. Put into freezer to harden.

Meringue topping: 2 egg whites

14 tsp vanilla extract

¼ tsp cream of tartar

Dear-Mrs. Green:

secd am a 52-year-old lady with many interests, one of which is graphology. I an right-handed. Would you please give me your interpretation of my handwirting?

In reading the Eccentric I'll keep my eye on your very interesting column to discover whether my handwriting is there.

Thank you so much.

Indeed you are a woman with a wide spectrum of interests. Many of these probably take place within your own home. Projects and activities are often solitary pursuits and do not always require other people.

Cultural exposure has been yours and you are no stranger to the finer things in life. Creativity is prominent in your handwriting. A good mind and math aptitude are also here.

The sensuousness in your handwrit. ing tells me you receive pleasure from any or all of the five senses. Your aesthetic sense is well developed.

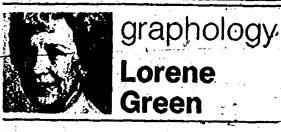

You are an observant person. Fastidious would describe your attention to details. And strong discipline has you handling all these details.

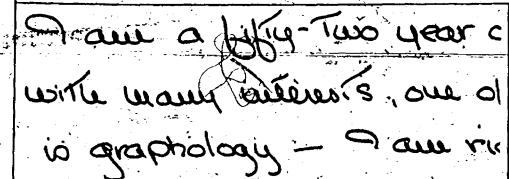

Basically you are an introspective person, one who often withholds her true feelings. Through the years you P.S. Bloomfield Hills have learned to present a more amiable and friendly facade than you may inwardly feel. Other times there is a directness about you and you have no problem saying it as you see it.

> It appears you are not finding your life as fulfilling as you might wish for at this particular time. Still there is optimism here, especially regarding your personal goals. Occasionally you retreat to an ivory tower to engage in a little daydreaming.

Early life reveals more mother influence than father,

'Plate Lady' dishes out variety

If you have a question about your handwriting, please write to Lorene C. Greene, a certified graphologist, in care of this newspaper. Use a full sheet of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular. Age and handedness are also helpful. If you would like to furnish feedback on your analysis for the column readers, please enclose a self-addressed envelope with your letter.

Dutch and Charlie pool their efforts

retirement memos

A gentleman everyone knows as "Dutch" has made a difference in the quality of life for people in the building. where we now live.

No one goes to our swimming pool in these balmy summer days without appreciating Dutch. We think of him as we take in the fragrance of the jasmine and enjoy the beauty of flowers with names still strange to me - purplish blue plumbago, dark red bouganvilla, pink jethrope and orange Mexican flamevine.

Some who go across the wide lawn on the way to the pool also enjoy meeting Dutch's friend Charlie. Charlie is a stately white bird, usually referred to as a heron but actually a great American egret, who favors our area with his presence largely because Dutch has fed him many fish.

FOR DUTCH, planting flowers at the pool evolved naturally, and it made a positive difference in his life as well as the lives of his neighbors.

· Like Joe and me, Dutch is a transplant from Detroit's western suburban area. He served on the beautification committees in his home community and helped plan landscaping for the city hall and school offices.

When he came to live in our building several years ago, plans for landscaping around the pool seemed to be coming to a halt because earmarked funds were running out.

"People were pretty concerned," he remembered, "because there were garden dug around the pool, but no plants being put in. It was late spring, so I told people who were going north for the summer to give me their houseplants instead of throwing them out."

Dutch began digging, glad to have a project that took him outside to the garden work he loved but kept him nearby where his wife, whose health was failing, could summon him if she needed help.

The "throwaway" plant did so well " that the next year owners of other apartments contributed to a special fund so Dutch could buy and plant larger buses and vines. These in furn prospered and spread.

And Dutch met Charlle that first year. "He came up behind me while I was working out there," the volunteer landscaper remembered, "and he waited while I went up to get him some DUTCH IS alone now, the long illness having claimed his wife's life! He's had a couple of operations and gets around more slowly so he can't do as much as he used to in his garden.

But the pool area is a place of beauty, and its planner basks in the appreciation of his neighbors. "I like doing it," he said," and I like it ever better now that people tell me how pleased they

And Charlie still comes to Dutch's third-floor window for a visit before taking his afternoon strolls on the green lawn.

Crawford calls the process of producing plates "complicated." Various methods may be involved including etching, stamping and underglazing; as well as various materials such as china; brass, crystal, stone and, by far the most popular, porcelain.

"I GOT STARTED in this in 1974 when my husband bought me the first two plates in Edna Hibel's mother and child series," Crawford recalled. "I thought this was a great way for the average person to buy art at a moderate price and to be able to see and enjoy it.

"I was working as an interior designer at the time, but I became so interested in collecting that my husband and I bought an old house in Farmington Hills with the intention of opening a collector's shop," she added.

"But when he died suddenly, I scrapped that location, left my job. and opened The Plate Lady," she said. Originally, Crawford's previous employer, Town & Country Interiors in Bloomfield Hills, provided her with floor space for her budding en-

"My former co-workers used to call me the dish lady," Crawford said. "I told them dishes were what you are from and that these were plates. From that I came up with the name The Plate Lady."

Two years ago, The Plate Lady outgrew the space available to it, and

Crawford moved her shop to its current location in Livonia. To handle the increased traffic, she has brought in and trained several associates including Diane Johns, Nancy White, Kathy Anderson, Rhoda Long and Chris Zakrajsek. "I had never been exposed to this before, and it's astounding," Johns, a Livonia resident, said. "People like coming in here and they're always willing to talk. They've never seen so many plates."

CRAWFORD SAID most customers who browse through her shop are looking for something in particular, but she welcomes new collectors.

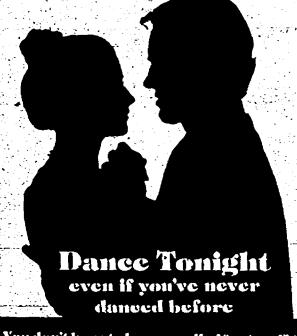

"We're available to advise people who are getting started in collecting," she said. "We can spend a lot of time with them if they want us to."

The Plate Lady is open Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Thursday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

'Plate Lady'dishes up art in the round

By Dan Vecchioni
staff writer

Lenore Crawford's world is full of happy children, goofy clowns, playful dogs, proud Indians, loving mothers, jolly Santas, spirited horses, hot-hitting sluggers, colorful flowers and sailing ships.

If that was not enough, she regularly witnesses ballet performances, the birth of Jesus, buffalo hunts, sunsets, passionate embraces, mischief, family gatherings and Christmas mornings.

These and other images and characters greet Crawford daily when she arrives to open her Livonia shop for business.

They come spilling from the hundreds of collector's plates and figurines that line her shop's walls and shelves.

Crawford owns, operates and, for all practical purposes, is The Plate Lady, located at 16347 Middlebelt Road tucked in between several other businesses in a small commercial center anchored by Mayfair Realty.

Unique in the area, The Plate Lady offers an assortment of collectibles and glit items predominated by plates and figurines but also including bells, music boxes, lithographs, dolls, beer steins and thimbles.

"EVERYBODY collects something," Crawford, a Southfield resident, said. "Very few people can come in here and leave without buying something. It's, a great way for the average person to accumulate great artwork at moderate prices."

Upon entering The Plate Lady, the plates command first attention. More than 400 of them, ranging in value from $15 to $2,000 and bearing names like Royal Doulton and Cartier, adorn the shop's walls and provide glimpses into special moments captured in an artist's paints:

Many contemporary artists are immortalized on the porcelain canvas of the plates. Perhaps the most popular is Norman Rockwell, whose witty imagination and gripping detail grace the plates as they once did the covers of the Saturday Evening Post.

"Rockwell is a steady favorite," Crawford admitted. However, others like Edna Hibel, Ted DeGrazia, Berta Hummel, Gregory Perillo, Frances Hook, LeRoy Nieman and Charles Schultz also have audiences, she added.

The popularity of collector's plates is a relatively new phenomenon, Crawford explained. In fact, the first collector's plate was born less than 90 years ago when in 1895 a Danish porcelain house smashed the mold for a plate it was producing to commemorate the Christmas holidays.

"All collector's plates are produced in limited quantities," Crawford said. "They're usually limited to five or 10 thousand. People buy them for their aesthetic value, and for pleasure, but they're also an investment."

To keep up with the changing prices of the thousands of plates produced since the first plate, the Bradford Exchange — the Stock Exchange of plates — was born, Crawford said.

Since 1973, Bradex has been quoting current prices of the most actively traded issues.

AS AN INDICATION of the value collectors place on plates, one need only look at "Behind the Frozen Window," the first one. About 400 were produced and sold for about 50 cents. Today, the plate lists with Bradex for $4,050.

For a more recent example, Rockwell's "The Toy Maker" was issued in 1977 for a price of $14.50. Bradex currently lists the plate at

"Investing gets tricky, though," Crawford warned. "Most plates will double in value in a few years. But we tell people to buy for pleasure and if it appreciates in value then that's great."

Hundreds of new plates are issued annually, she pointed out. New artists and series regularly are released and promoted by the dozens of plate makers throughout the world. "As long as a company feels the plate can be promoted, they'll produce it," she said.

As a result, many of the plates commemorate popular movies and celebrities that the plate makers feel would generate sales.

Along the walls and shelves of The Plate Lady, one can find plates emblazoned with scenes from such movies as "Gone With the Wind," "The Wizard of Oz" and "Annie." Other plates feature the likenesses of Elvis Presley, John Wayne, Henry Fonda and Reggie Jackson. There is even a M-A-S-H plate.

NBA surprise: Gonzalez taken

By Tom Henderson staff writer

Monday, July 4, 1983 O&E

Tim Andree and Rob Gonzalez have a lot in common. Both are products of the Detroit Catholic League basketball program. Both enjoyed fabulous prep careers that had college scouts drooling and sports writers searching for adjectives. Both wore can't-miss labels to major colleges, where amateur stardom would be but a stepping stone to pro stardom in the National Basketball Association.

There's more in common: While neither exactly flopped, Gonzalez and Andree hardly lived up to their prep billings. Gonzalez barely played in his freshman and sophomore years at Michigan State, where his label changed from "can't-miss" to "tooslow." He finally transferred to Colorado, sat out a year, then played steadily but unspectacularly his last two seasons. Andree moved into Notre Dame's starting lineup as a freshman, but by the time he was a senior he was second string. Critics said he, too, was too slow; he averaged but 21/2 points a game as a senior and in 27 games totaled exactly one - count 'em, one -

PRO CAREERS? What once seemed a certainty, at least to them, if not their legions of prep fans, had become a seeming impossibility. Gonzalez averaged 10 points a game at Colorado, but he was just 6-foot-7 with only average jumping ability. As for Andree? Well, if he couldn't start at Notre Dame, if he could average but 2.5 points a game, if he could manage one measly assist in 27 games . . .

So it should come as no surprise that what happened Tuesday came as very much of a surprise to both Andree and Gonzalez, who got to share yet another thing in common: They both were selected in the NBA draft, Andree early in the fifth round by the Chicago Bulls and Gonzalez early in the seventh round by the Detroit Pistons.

You can call them slow. You can call them bad jumpers. Call them what you will. The only calls Gonzalez and Andree cared about last week were the calls they got from the teams asking them if they'd be interested in a career as professional basketball players.

ANDREE WAS STUNNED at going in round five. (Though round five is considerably better than, say, round 10 and indicates the Bulls think he has potential, it is rare for picks lower than round three to make an NBA team. The draft becomes a lottery, parceling out chances to the participating teams; the player selected just ahead of Andree was one Manute Bol of The Sudan, who, though not well versed in high-fives, is

7 feet 6 inches tall according to rumor.) "I thought I'd probably get drafted, just on my size," said Andree, who is 6 feet 10, "but I was surprised I went that Andree, a deft scorer in high school with a wondrous outside touch, defended his lack of scoring stats during his college career and insisted he is a better player than people think. "There were no personal problems between him Digger Phelps, Notre Dame coach) and me. We just had very different ideas. I'm a team player, and I obey the coach. I accepted a role I didn't appreciate.

*FOR THREE YEARS I was a starter with a non-offensive role. I rebounded, set screens. I wasn't supposed to shoot . . . The center at Notre Dame_ generally is not a big scorer just because of the offense we run. Look at Bill Laimbeer (the Pistons' center). When he graduated from Notre Dame, nobody thought he'd make it in the NBA, let alone become an All-Star. That's inspiration for me. I'm not saying that's going to happen to me, but It keeps me working hard.

"Hey, I've been through a lot of frustration. When I came out of Brother Rice, I was the greatest thing since sliced bread. It took me a while to get used to the idea that I (wasn't a star), that I might not go in the first round. But my family, friends and coaches at Notre Dame stayed behind me, and I worked hard, and it's all paying off."

The NBA draft isn't the only good thing happening in basketball for Andree, who returned last week from a tour of Spain, where 12 Americans played five games against local teams. Andree averaged 18 points a game and was offered a contract by the Barcelona team for next season.

"We're negotiating," added Andre. "It's for between $45,000 and $65,000 a year. So if the NBA doesn't work out, I'll still have a very good playing job. It's been a good week."

It's a long shot for Rob Gonzalez, but the ex-Catholic Central star hopes to sneak into the University of Colorado graduate in the seventh

Redford wrestler is Midwest champ

By Tom Henderson staff writer

Jason Wiebeck is a skinny; little kid, a 105-pounder who looks like he should be sitting on a beach waiting for bullies to kick sand in his face.

Instead, he travels the country knocking people on their rears, pinning their shoulders to the ground, putting one hold on them after another and generally turning them every which way but loose.

If you doubt that, ask his opponent in the freestyle wrestling finals at last weekend's regional Junior Olympics in Indianapolis. With the title on the line and a gold medal at stake. Jason raced out, swarmed his foe and had him on his back and pinned within 20 seconds.

Jason Wiebeck gold medalist

That gold went nicely with a silver medal Jason won in the same meet for finishing second in Greco-Roman wrestling. (In Greco-Roman, all the moves and holds are above the waist.)

Golds are nothing new to Jason. He was the Amateur Athletic Union's state champion last year and the AAU Midwest zone titlist in Ohio three weeks ago:

"His goal," said proud pop Jerry, "is to wrestle in the Olympics and pin everyone he faces."

SINCE JASON is just 14, he will have to wait until at least 1988 to wrestle in the Olympics. Closer to home, in time and distance, is his upcoming career at Catholic Central. A Redford Township native, Wiebeck will be a freshman at CC this fall, where he will join a program that won the state Class A wrestling title

Mike Rodriguez, Central's wrestling coach, won't have to worry about Wiebeck's dedication.

"I lift weights an hour every day," said Jason, who has been wrestling competitively for six years, "And I run an hour every day and work out two hours on my wrestling. Oh, yeah, and a half-hour on the body bag."

FOUR and a half hours a day? "A lot of days it's more than that," said his father, who wrestled as a heavyweight for Thurston before gradualing in 1963.

All year round? "Yep," sald Jason

Jason wrestles for the Michigan Wrestling Glub and for Team Michigan, an AAU team-sponsored by Compuware. Though quiet and shy, he admits to being a tiger on the mat. "Most of his wins are by pins or else he points them out," said his dad, When a wrestler goes 12 points up on his opponent, the match is ended; that's how you "point them out."

U-M sports camps lets kids develop skills

By Chris McCosky staff writer

If the neighborhood seems devoid of youngsters at various times throughout this long, hot summer, don't sweat it. The kids are probably in Ann Arbor becoming champions.

The University of Michigan summer "Camps of Champions" have been stealing youngsters away from neighborhoods across the state and throughout the Midwest with increasing regularity. And you won't hear anyboby complaining about it - not the parents, not the university, and certainly not the kids.

From June 12 through Aug. 12, U-M offers 17 separate, one-week sports ~ camps for boys and girls ages 10 through 18. Camps are offered in baseball, men's and women's basketball, cheerleading, field hockey, golf, gymnastics, ice hockey, soccer, softball, athletic trainers (sports medicine), swimming, tennis, track and field, volleyball, wrestling, and football.

THESE CAMPS are run by college coaches, most from the University of Michigan. For example, U-M baseball coach Bud Middaugh runs the baseball' camp. U-M assistant football coach Gary Moeller runs the football camp. Head basketball coach Bill Frieder runs the basketball camp for boys and women's head coach Gloria Soluk runs the girls' hoop camp. You get the idea.

pect to draw some 6,700 kids. "You know what makes the Camps of Champions special?" said Don Triveline, U-M's director of marketing and promotions who is the founder and overseer of the camps. "Not only do the campers get outstanding training intheir sport, but they get to experience first-hand what it's like to attend a university. They live on campus, eat dorm food ... it answers a lot of questions they might have about going to college."

CAMPERS CAN STAY on campus or commute from home. When they stay in Ann Arbor, the campers are housed in the South Quad dormatories and make sure the kids are taken care of housing profits, and promoting the unireceive three meals a day, one meal on We make sure that all but eight hours versity to 20,000 potential students, the Sunday and Friday.

The average day for a camper is tightly structured. Here's a brief look at a camper's day:

• 7:15 a.m. — Wake up. • 7:30-8:30 a.m. — Breakfast.

• 9-11 a.m. - First instructional period. • 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. — Lunch.

"The kids seem to really enjoy the (swim, sight see, shop, work on sports camp. They always tell me it's like going to college for a week. They say they learned a lot and they all say the food is bad. But, they keep coming back," Triveline said.

As beneficial as the Camps of Champs have been for area youngsters, they have been even more so for the University of Michigan, Besides creating numerous summer jobs, promoting the Ann Arbor economy, increasing Camps of Champs have managed to increase profits by more than 50 percent in each of their three years. This year, Triveline expects the summer camps to bring in about $100,000 profit.

"It's definitely a two-way deal," Triveline said. "The campers get one week of being a college student, one week of top-notch college instruction. They meet new friends, they live, eat, and train with others which is a valuable experience for a kid.

"And we get a chance to promote the university, promote the Ann Arbor. community and to create employment," he said.

It has been said that champions are made not born. There are 11 opensports camps at the U-M Camps of Champions (see chart), so mom and dad, there is still time to make a champion out of your kid. Call Triveline at (313) 763-6767 for registration details.

'84 Olympic sport? Brunswick hopes so

A nationwide drive is now underway to make bowling part of the 1984 Olympic Games.

Knowing that bowling is a worldwide sport with major lanes in almost every country, the Brunswick Co., in conjunction with the Bowling Proprietors Association of America, is asking bowlers across the land to sign a petition requesting recognition.

At a proprietors convention last week in Miami, Fla., more than. 100,000 signatures were filed with the drive expected to go well above that number.

A close-to-manic Robin Williams gets tied up to keep him out of trouble in "The Survivors," the movies Louise Snider

Comic co-stars turn into losers in 'Survivors'

One look at Walter Matthau's jowls, whatever the expression, one listen to Robin Williams' blitzkrieg speech, whatever the . words, and you're going to laugh, whatever the situation.

These two qualities are the primary assets of "The Survivors" (R). In fact, they are the only assets, and they aren't enough to sustain a movie for one hour and 40 minutes. But that is what they must do because of Michael Ritchie's loose direction and Michael Leeson's woefully weak script.

The movie begins with a brisk sequence of scenes suggesting a biting but comic approach to contemporary social problems.

Within the first 15 minutes, Williams, as Donald, a dental supplies salesman, is fired from his job by a parrot (the boss doesn't like the trauma of firing employees), threatened by a gun-wielding secretary, rudely treated at the unemployment center and threatened again, this time by a robber at a lunch counter.

MATTHAU, AS SONNY, a gas-station owner forced out of business, has similar unnerving and frustrating experiences. His interview with a sari-clad social worker as he applies for unemployment benefits is a comic highlight of the film. Afterwards, he and Donald meet at the lunch counter where they are thrown together by their resistance to the attempted robbery.

From this point on, the movie loses much of its pungency and focus as it spins off in several directions, none of which develops the original theme of the two men-coping-with unemployment. "The Survivors" then digresses into confrontations between the gunman (country singer Jerry Reed) and Sonny, and the gunman in pursuit of Donald, for no reason which makes any sense.

Meanwhile, Donald has become overwhelmingly paranoid. He has armed himself to the teeth and abandoned his urban life for a military-style survival-training program and condo in Vermont.

Occasional flashes of bright dialogue make this unstructured film bearable, as when Donald, trying to convince his fiancee of the need for weapons, asks her, "What are you going to do when they break down the door? Stun'em with your good taste?"

But more often than not, Ritchie allows the manic to overrun the comic. The result is disastrous because Donald really seems mentally ill, and that's not funny.

IT IS STILL ANOTHER example of how incoherent a film this is. You can't tell the plot from the subplots, the important from the trivial. Nor do the characters mesh. Jerry Reed does a clean-cut, capable job as the gunman, but Matthau and Williams, who should make a wildly comic duo, never click as a team. Each actor seems too engrossed in his own comic devices — be they basset-hound looks or off-the-wall dialogue — to respond to the other.

This lack of responsiveness between characters, added to the general unstructured and rambling nature of "The Survivors," places its survival seriously in doubt.

and-Walter Matthau both lose their jobs and band together to survive, but the plot's more furious

Jerry Reed is an unemployed hitman looking for work who tries armed robbery.
