Brandon O'Sullivan didn't expect to win national honors for the poster he did for Westland's Martin Luther King Day ceremony let alone one he did to promote the saving of antiquities. But he now has two gold awards from the National Scholastic Art and Writing competition.

Artwork wins national honors

Career Tech student earns 2 awards in scholastic competition

Brandon O'Sullivan didn't think he'd win with the portfolio he entered in the Scholastic Art and Writing Awards competition.

Now, after winning two national gold awards, the John Glenn High School senior thinks he needs to do a bit more.

I was surprised, I didn't think I'd win anything, he said. It kind of makes me think I need to do extra work on my portfolio. It means I have more work to do.

And two to boot, said his teacher, Steve Paulsen. It's pretty crazy, unnatural. It's hard enough to win one.

O'Sullivan won the awards for work he did in Paulsen's graphics design class at the William D. Ford Career Technical Center. Principal Ginny Kowalski believes this may be the first gold award a center student has

WAYNE HIGH STUDENTS' PORTFOLIOS WIN SILVER

Brandon O'Sullivan isn't the only Wayne-Westland student to win in the National Scholastic Arts and Writing competition.

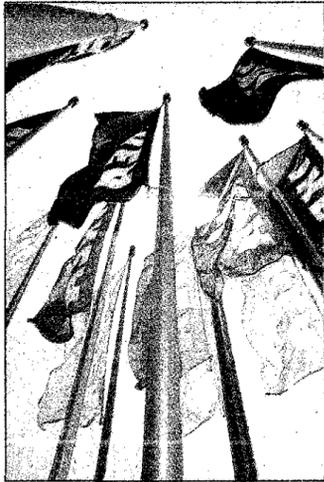

Two students at Wayne Memorial High School, Noe'lf Love and Alison Gardiner, received national silver portfolio awards in the contest. The two teens were among 100 students from across the country whose portfolios were selected for recognition and among eight students from Michigan to receive national recognition.

They both submitted portfolios containing eight pieces which were juried in New York for exhibition in Washington, D.C., this month. In a presentation before the Wayne-Westland school board in May, Love said that had she not been introduced to art, my days would be dull and lifeless.

Every day is like another picture waiting to be printed, she said. Gardiner thanked everyone for helping her with her artwork.

I get my inspiration from my family and my teachers, she said. The two students received certificates of recognition from board Vice President Cindy Schofield, who called their art pieces phenomenal.

I look forward to seeing your artwork with your name on it and saying we knew you when you were in the Wayne-Westland schools, she said.

The IKEA banners are whipping in the breeze, seemingly ready for the store's June 7 grand opening. The store carries more than 10,000 different items, displayed in 56 room settings, and three complete modular homes, ranging from approximately 250 square feet up to nearly 700 square feet.

Shoppers start your engines: IKEA opening a week away

BY CAROL MARSHALL
STAFF WRITER

In just a little less than a week, IKEA Canton will open its doors and show its customers - as if they needed instructions - how to shop.

So what's inside the big yellow and blue building in Canton? Just about everything for the home, said IKEA spokesman Joseph Roth. The store carries more than 10,000 different items, displayed in 56 room settings, and three complete modular homes, ranging from approximately 250 square feet up to nearly 700 square feet.

The shopping experience begins just inside the front door, where a large sign tells shoppers, Canton, go to your room. Shoppers can pick up baby strollers, or check children into a supervised play room. There are pencils, a map and shopping list, and tape measures available at the front door, so shoppers are prepared to select everything they need for the home.

The escalator just inside the front door is the starting point for nearly 2 million shoppers expected to visit every year.

Arrows on the floor direct shoppers through the 311,000 square feet of shopping space. Displays are set up to include every element - from sofas to shelving and entertainment stands, to tables, can-

What's in a name? Candidates hope familiarity breeds election success

BY TONY BRUSCATO STAFF WRITER

Some candidates running for public office hope family names connote good things — including votes — headed into the campaign season with August primaries and the November general election.

Running for office with a recognizable last name could be a plus, but only if it brings positive reactions from voters who remember those family members who previously held or currently hold public office.

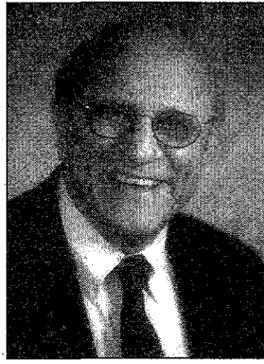

James Plakas' surname is well-known around political circles.

Plakas, a Northville resident is seeking a 35th District Court judgeship in Plymouth, said he's often drawn into conversations about his father and uncle.

Father Angelo Plakas has been practicing law since 1969 and is the city attorney for Westland. Uncle Jim Plakas was a city councilman and mayor in Garden City before being elected to represent the 16th House District in Lansing.

"Without a question it's a positive thing," said James Plakas, an 11-year attorney with his father's Westland law firm whose experience includes representing plaintiffs, as well as prosecuting cases as an assistant city attorney for Westland. "They have been very good at what they do, and very well-liked and respected. So, it can only benefit me."

Beth Stewart, Republican candidate for the 20th House seat, believes the current office holder — Rep. John Stewart (R-Plymouth Township) — has done an exceptional job the past six years, and that is a positive in efforts to succeed her term-limited husband in Lansing.

"Name identification is a big thing, and a lot of people ask if I'm related (to John)," said Stewart. "A lot of people, who don't understand term limits, ask if I'm running against him."

"John's been out there meeting and greeting and doing things in the community, and I get people telling me all the time he calls them back and answers their e-mails," she said. "I think they hope I would continue to do the same thing, if I'm elected."

Mention the name Jerry Vorva, and you most likely will get a positive or negative reaction to someone well-known for speaking his mind. Vorva has a long legacy in Plymouth, serving as a city commissioner, a state representative and as the main plaintiff in a lawsuit that held up, for several years, the bond issue that eventually built Plymouth High School and Discovery ar-old son, Jason, is also a candidate for the 20th House seat. And the elder Vorva isn't sure how the surname will affect his son's run for state office.

"I don't know if it will help him or harm him," Vorva said. "But, I think with a familiar name, it will cause voters to inquire about him, as opposed to someone with an unfamiliar name."

Jason Vorva thinks his dad's name and reputation will generate some votes.

"I think it's a plus because you're known for saying exactly what you think," said Jason Vorva. "I consider it a huge plus, and accept the label of straight-talker."

Others running for office with familiar last names include Ron Lowe, who is seeking re-election as 35th District Court judge.

His dad James Lowe was a Garden City mayor and councilman and was a former

Angelo Plakas Westland city attorney

Plymouth city attorney, the latter a position Ron Lowe also held before being elected to the bench.

Kevin McNamara of Canton Township, the son of the late former Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara, is seeking a seat on the Wayne County Board of Commissioners.

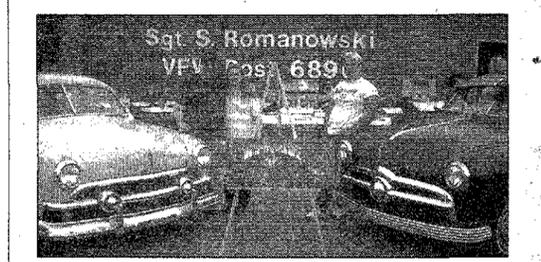

Political expert Bill Ballenger, the editor of Inside Michigan Politics, said those seeking election to political office are almost always successful — especially at the state level — when tied to a familiar last name.

"Amazingly, the track record is very good for family members with the same last name as those who have held, or are currently in, office," said Ballenger. "In the era of term limits, since the late 1990s, virtually every one of these (state) candidates have been elected."

Volunteers put green in park with plantings

Natalie Thurmond had a goal of planting 1,000 trees this spring ... with the help of a few people, of course.

A local Shaklee entrepreneur, Thurmond was participating in a Shaklee Corporation campaign to plant one million trees in celebration of Earth Day 2006.

That day has come and gone, but not before Thurmond distributed more than 2,000 white pine seedlings for planting.

"I had such a wonderful time with the white pine seedlings and all the terrific people I met," the Westland resident wrote in an e-mail. "Your cooperation and enthusiasm helped my project to exceed 2,750 trees."

Five elementary schools, two day cares, one church and Westland Parks and Recreation Department helped her exceed her goal, and in the case of the later, the seedlings are helping forest the city's Merriman Park.

Twenty of the seedlings were planted along the north edge of the park on Merriman north of Palmer.

Boy Scouts, Brownies and several families helped with the planting as part of the Parks and Recreation department's Earth Day Delayed program.

"In the past, the Earth Day program, held two weeks later than the actual Earth Day, focused on filling the planters around the Bailey Recreation Center, but this year, with Thurmond's help, the focus shifted to the park.

"We decided to do the park in part because there's not a lot there," said recreation supervisor Margaret Martin. "It has a pavilion, a parking lot and a play structure."

Day-long rain made it somewhat of a muddy event and held down participation, but those who did show up received certificates, an Earth Day coloring book and lollipop and seedling, provided by Thurmond and State Sen. Laura Toy, R-Livonia.

Those who participated were charged 50 cents to cover the cost of the seedlings.

"We chose white pines because they're the state tree," said Martin, adding that the volunteers received a talk about planting trees before the work started.

In spite of the small turnout and wet weather, Martin rated the event a big success.

"It was very sweet," she said.

District looks at updating textbooks

BY STEPHANIE ANGELYN CASOLA
STAFF WRITER

Livonia Public School trustees are considering the purchase of updated textbooks and materials to support secondary-level foreign language classes.

At the next regular board meeting, on June 5, trustees will vote on a recommendation to purchase materials for German and Japanese language classes. The books, teacher's manuals and supplemental materials total almost $36,000, though the district stands to receive an additional $22,000 in materials at no cost.

"Last year you approved Spanish textbooks for middle school and high school Spanish 1-5," said Sheila Alles, director of academic services. "Staying with the world language theme, we're recommending new textbooks for Japanese and German classes at the high schools."

Alles described the committee process and research leading up to her recommendation for textbook adoptions.

She said foreign language teachers first analyzed the current curriculum and sample textbooks to ensure the new materials would be aligned to both national standards and state benchmarks. Committees then reviewed the organization of the texts, coming from multiple publishers, and evaluated the contents.

After selecting their top two choices, teachers asked students for their perspective. Students reviewed whether the books were clear, understandable and easy to follow, Alles said. Finally high school principals reviewed the choices before recommending that they be purchased.

The books under recommendation include: Adventures in Japanese, levels 1-4 to accommodate various classes; Deutsch Aktuell 1-3 and Kaleidoskop for German IV students.

Trustee Rob Freeman questioned the cost of shipping for this purchase, which makes up about 10 percent. "It's highway robbery," said Freeman.

Alles said 10 percent is "in the ballpark for shipping and handling charges." She said it's about the most the district will pay for that service.

Library looking for summer readers

School will soon be out for the summer and while children can chant about no more teachers, that can't say that about books. Especially if they're signing up for the William P. Faust Public Library's summer reading program.

Registration for the annual event is 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, June 10, at the library on Central City Parkway north of Ford Road. Chester Cheetah will be there, and every child will receive free Cheetos and a treat bag.

Children who register will receive a reading log to keep track of the minutes they read. For every 100 minutes, a child will receive a prize. Children need to read 500 minutes to complete the program.

Program materials will be handed out as well as detailed calendars to help kids make their plans. A calendar of events also is available on the library Web site at www.westland.lib.mi.us.

All finishers will receive a free book, an invitation to the Summer Reading Program Party and an entry form for a chance to win a grand prize.

The theme is "Paws, Claws, Scales and Tales," and there's plenty for kids to see and do between June 10 and July 29.

Maureen Schiffman's puppet artistry will bring music and magic in "Animal Fair." Ron Blauet from the Michigan Humane Society will offer a wealth of experience to guide young animal owners in responsible pet care.

The Home Again Avian Rescue team will bring birds rarely seen, and explain how to keep these colorful creatures safe. The library's guest chemist, Dr. Rick Brudzynski, makes science fun with hands-on activities and children will even be able to take "flubber" home.

The Plymouth Symphony Quartet will also perform and Michigan author Ron Meyer will feature his beautifully photographed book, Freddy Fox. Children also will meet Michael Brophy of R.E.P.T.I.L.E., Inc. and Science Alive visitors, each hosting two shows.

Craft sessions appeal to young artists and there's a variety available. Whether deciding on 3-D animal art, pet rocks, fancy fans, sidewalk chalk, pet books or cake decorating, children will find programs unique to their interests. Make It Take It craft 2-4 p.m. Thursdays are open to all ages.

Tales with Tails story times also are a fun way to bring family and friends together. Teens also can get involved with Creature Feature @ Your Library. The summer reading program is for lids in sixth-12th grades.

There will be weekly raffles, contests and prizes, including an Under the Sea art contest and teen poetry contest, sponsored by the Friends of the Library, visits by the Reptile Guy, movies and Teen Creature Creations.

Teens who finish the program will be entered in a grand prize drawing for a $100 shopping spree.

Beardslee honored for service

Beardslee

Co-op Services Credit Union recently recognized Westland resident Marie Beardslee for 40 years of outstanding service to the credit union. Beardslee currently serves as senior vice president of operations, and has no intentions of retiring soon.
"I've truly enjoyed being part of our credit union's growth," she said. "When I started, we had only $3 million in assets, and now we have more than $270 million."
Beardslee began her career in 1966 as a switchboard teller, handling member transactions over the phone," said Anthony Carnarvon, president and CEO. "She modestly acknowledges that she has held nearly every position within the credit union prior to assuming her current role as senior vice president of operations in 1991.

"Marie has been an anchor for all of us over the years," said Anthony Carnarvon, president and CEO.
"Our credit union would not be what it is today without Marie's incredible dedication, experience and expertise."
Looking back over the years, Beardslee recalled the credit union offered simple loans and savings accounts, when she first started.
"Today, we offer a wide variety of financial products and services, from fixed and adjustable rate mortgages to retirement plans," she said.

Beardslee played an integral role in implementing Co-op Services ATM card program and introduction of the credit union's first ATM machine in 1971. She also was instrumental in the development of IRA products for members during the 1990s.
"We are fortunate to have so many loyal employees like Marie," said Carnarvon. "She is such a wonderful role model."
Co-op Services Credit Union has approximately 43,000 members and branch offices in Dearborn, Livonia, Walled Lake, Westland and Downriver. For more information about Co-op Services, where anyone can join, visit the credit union Web site at www.cscu.org or call (800) 321-8570.

AWARDS

ever won in the national competition.
"Brandon's a very unique student, a great, great student," said Kowalski. "He's one of those kids who's overcome insurmountable odds to succeed."

WINNING PIECES

The two posters selected for gold awards include one of Martin Luther King that O'Sullivan did for the City of Westland's Martin Luther King Day ceremony. The other, entitled "Teach the Young with the Old," promotes SAFE - Save Antiquities for Everyone - a campaign to save stolen antiquities.
"I like the idea of collages, I like the square theme," O'Sullivan said of his King poster. "I've used it in other pieces."

The poster features squares of muted gray, mauve, brown and a random pattern of blue with a dropout of King as an overlay.
O'Sullivan used an antique vessel as the focal point of the SAFE poster, with color bars to highlight the text.
"I really like the color bars," he said. "I was looking for something to put with the picture. The color helps with the layout of the type."

O'Sullivan entered a portfolio of eight pieces in the competition. The eight pieces also were entered individually.

Career Technical students dominated the southeast Michigan regional competition, taking all of the gold and most of the silver. O'Sullivan's entries were among the 800 entries from the state level went on to the national competition.
O'Sullivan discovered he had won at the state level when he went with Paulsen and several other students to the Center for Creative Studies to help set up the state show.
Paulsen initially didn't think O'Sullivan had won, but then a few weeks later heard he had won "something." It took another few weeks to determine that he had won gold awards.
"I thought I had other pieces in my portfolio that were good, if not better than these," O'Sullivan said.
"To put this in perspective, his two posters were chosen from 17,000 works of art and 3,000 selections of writing. He is one of 1,450 national award recipients," said Kowalski.

His winning artwork will appear at the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C. and he has been invited to accept his award at Carnegie Hall.

PLANS FOR FUTURE
O'Sullivan is mapping out his future which includes one-two years of study at Washtenaw Community College before hopefully transferring to the Art Institute of Chicago to study graphic design and videography, something he's been "tinkering with on the side."

"I've been editing my friends' videos for classes for a small fee," he said. "There's a lot of freedom with the job."

He calls himself a Renaissance Man. As a child, he wanted to be a cartoonist, played hockey for awhile and did some karate. He had never done anything with computers until he got in Paulsen's class.

"I didn't think I'd enjoy it and it wasn't until my second year that I realized I did," he said. "That's when I started taking it seriously instead of coasting along."

He already has a leg up on his collegiate studies. Through an agreement with Washtenaw, Henry Ford, Schoolcraft and Oakland Community colleges and Ferris State University, O'Sullivan will receive nine credit hours for completing Paulsen's class.

"The one thing I hear a lot from students is that you're not learning, you're doing," Paulsen said. "We expose students to the real world and they either love it or don't."

Paulsen is proud of O'Sullivan's accomplishments. "He's the luckiest I've ever seen," he said. "Now we need to try and get him some scholarship money. We need to get him some scholarships."

dles and picture frames, to throw rugs and blankets – and are designed to look as if the people living there simply left the room for a minute.

The only difference is the fact every item has a tag – either red or yellow.

Red tag items can be found and carried out of a massive warehouse area on the first floor. Yellow tag items (such as large furniture – sofas and the like) must be retrieved by IKEA staff from a warehouse located just off the self-serve warehouse area. Tags specify what warehouse aisle, row and bin number each item will be found.

Shoppers are directed through home office and IKEA in the workplace areas, bedrooms and kitchens, the most important area of the house, according to Roth.

“We believe the kitchen is the heart of every home,” Roth said.

Just before shoppers head back downstairs is a 300-seat restaurant featuring sandwiches, several salmon and herring dishes, meatballs, a children’s menu, and a 99-cent bacon and eggs breakfast.

Downstairs shoppers find the marketplace, which Roth said is the heart of the store. It’s the area where visitors find everything from pots and pans and dishes to rugs, artwork, flooring, bedding and linens, and even plants. It’s also where they find the least expensive item in the store – a 25-cent cat food dish.

IKEA Canton opens June 7, at 9 a.m., one hour earlier than usual hours. Normal business hours are 10 a.m. – 9 p.m. daily.

Welcome mats raise money for research

Independent Carpet One in Westland is selling the fall 2005 collection of specially-designed pink ribbon welcome mats to show support for the fight against breast cancer.

The sale marks Carpet One’s fourth “Carpet One Welcomes Your Support” campaign, which raises funds for the American Cancer Society’s breast cancer programs through sales of the distinctive welcome mats.

During the previous three campaigns, Carpet One stores nationwide have raised more than $340,000 for the American Cancer Society and the Canadian Cancer Society.

Independent Carpet One will donate 25 percent of the sale price from each mat to the local American Cancer Society office. All funds from the store will be earmarked for breast cancer awareness, research and advocacy.

“We are really looking forward to continuing our support for this cause in the upcoming campaign,” said Tina Marie Sutherland of Independent Carpet One. “We feel it’s extremely important to be a socially responsible business and to give back to our community.”

Four designs are available – Autumn Welcome with maple leaves and a border of rich autumn tones surround the simple message of optimism captured by the word “Hope;” Celebration, a unique pattern of brilliant swirling colors complemented by a warm background to welcome guests; Seasonal Stripes, contemporary stripes featured in a range of vibrant fall colors backed by a warm inviting tone; and Fall Bouquet with its wandering vines and flowers in a variety of blues and pink tones, framed by a distinct black border.

The indoor/outdoor welcome mats are durable, stain- and water-resistant and machine-washable. The mats are available through June at Independent Carpet One for $19.99 each. Twenty-five percent of the sale of each welcome mat will go to the local American Cancer Society chapter.

Visit Independent Carpet One at 1400 N. Wayne Road, or call (734) 729-6200.

Metro authority unveils model of north terminal

The Wayne County Airport Authority May 25 unveiled a model of the north terminal which is under construction at Detroit Metropolitan Wayne County Airport. The eight-foot-long model of the 26-gate terminal was displayed at the Authority Board's meeting along with 13 large conceptual renderings including interior views.

"We have been talking about this terminal and showing drawings over the past couple of years," said airport CEO Lester Robinson. "But the three-dimensional model provides the viewer a much better understanding of how the terminal will look and operate."

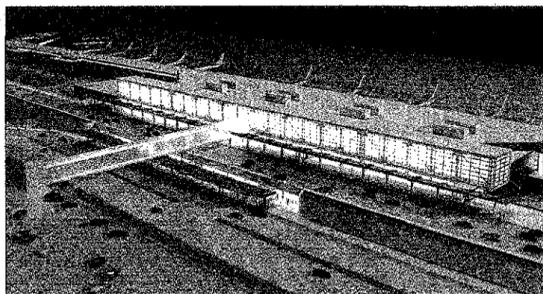

Also on display at the meeting were samples of a variety of materials and interior finishes proposed for the $418 million project.

Site preparation is well under way, with the old Davey Terminal demolished and massive wrecking equipment continuing its assault on the former Marriott Hotel, which should be down early in June.

Work on installing a mat foundation for the north terminal check-in building has begun and soon the old apron (aircraft parking area) will be broken up. Bids have been received for structural steel and steel piles and the construction and installation of a hydrant fueling system which are being reviewed by the project team. In the meantime, Artist's view of the passenger waiting area in the new North Terminal.

An artist's rendering of Detroit Metropolitan Airport's new North Terminal

Spirit Airlines will soon be closing three gates on the north side of old concourse C and shifting those operations to gates on the south side to make room for the north terminal project. This will have no impact on customers.

According to north terminal project director Jon Hypnar, the design should be 100 percent complete by the end of June and approximately 7,000 tons of structural steel will begin arriving on the construction site early this fall. Twenty-six jet bridges have been purchased and the baggage system contract has been awarded.

"With its simple linear design and modern conveniences, the north terminal will represent a significant upgrade in customer conveniences compared to the Smith and Berry Terminals," said Robinson. "It will also provide a considerable improvement in efficiency for the airlines."

Scheduled airlines to relocate from the aging Smith and Berry Terminals to the new north terminal include: Air Canada, American, Air Tran, Frontier, Southwest, Spirit, United, USAirways/American West and USA 3000 as well as non-scheduled airlines such as Champion Air, Ryan Air and others. International carriers

British Airways, Lufthansa and Royal Jordanian will move from the McNamara Terminal. Northwest Airlines and its SkyTeam partners, Northwest Airlin, Air France, Continental and Delta will remain in the McNamara Terminal which opened in February 2002.

The north terminal is still on schedule for a 2008 grand opening. The Airport Authority plans to install the model in the check-in lobby of the Smith Terminal and display renderings at www.metroairport.com.

After 20 years, Rouge Rescue lives up to name

It's been 20 years since a group of volunteers embarked on an ambitious journey to restore the Rouge River, which had become one of the most polluted rivers in the country after decades of mismanagement.

At the time of the first Rouge Rescue, in June 1986, many areas of the Rouge were filled with trash, smelly and dangerous. Although organizers weren't sure how many people would show up, some 2,000 volunteers came out, proving there was plenty of interest in restoring the highly urbanized watershed.

In that first year, volunteers descended on the river at 18 different sites and concentrated their efforts on pulling shopping carts, cars and other manmade debris from the river, and cutting away the many logjams that impeded the river's flow.

The Rouge River, and Rouge Rescue event itself, have come a long way since that first year. The health of the river has improved dramatically, as municipalities, flooded with federal money, have fixed aging sewer systems and enacted stricter planning laws to comply with the federal Clean Water Act. Public education has also been a big part of changing people's habits and attitudes. Most people now know you shouldn't pour used motor oil down a storm drain at the end of the street.

While there is much work to do before the restoration is complete, the Rouge River National Wet Weather Demonstration Project is now a model of how to reclaim a river system. Throughout the Rouge, dissolved oxygen levels, so important for aquatic organisms, have improved and dangerous E. coli bacteria levels have dropped.

Rouge Rescue, always held the first Saturday in June, has also evolved. Because trash isn't as prevalent as it once was, volunteers now perform more constructive activities, such as planting native plants or removing non-native invasive plants, building trails, or just going on a guided nature walk. They also don't tear out all the logjams anymore, something that proved harmful to the river in the past.

This Saturday, about 3,700 volunteers are expected to come out to 44 sites in 27 Rouge communities, according to Friends of the Rouge, the organization that was born of that first Rouge Rescue 20 years ago. And while the volunteers will do plenty of work, the event will also be a celebration of how far the Rouge River has come since the spirit of those first volunteers changed its course. We can't wait to see how the river looks in another 20 years.

Authority best plan for mental health

The Wayne County Commission is moving forward on a plan to transfer control of the Detroit Wayne County Mental Health Agency from the county to an independent authority.

A resolution was introduced last week to separate mental health services from county government.

Under the proposal, the authority could begin replacing current staff by September 2007. Mental health workers would become employees of the authority and not the county. The executive director would hire top staff members instead of the county executive. The authority would approve purchases and make contracts without county approval.

The county's allocation for mental health funds would be frozen at the 2005-06 level of about $177 million.

The authority would have control over millions of dollars in state and federal Medicaid funding, currently at risk.

The commission is expected to move on the resolution in the next two weeks.

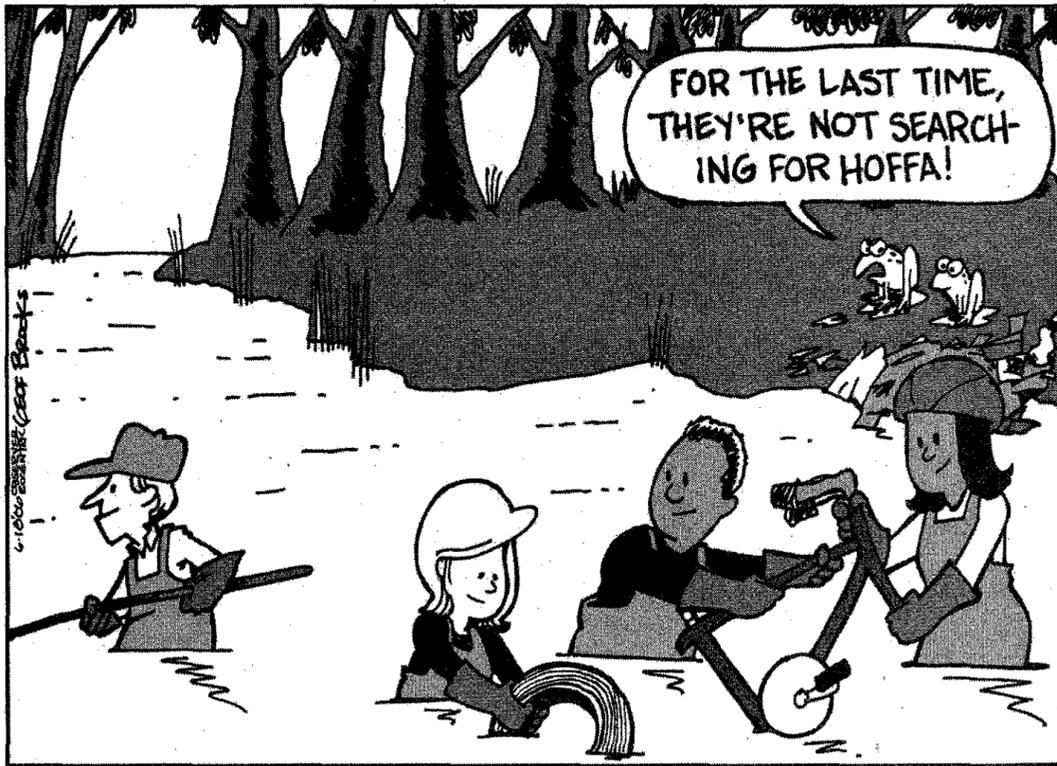

The action follows years of wrangling over the county's handling of state and federal funding. Proposals in the state House and Senate threaten to withhold funding unless an authority were created to replace county control.

County Executive Robert Ficano has long argued that many of the problems within the county Mental Health Board were caused by the current board makeup of six members appointed by the executive and six by the mayor of Detroit. Last week, the commission passed a resolution to change the board makeup to 13 members all appointed by the executive, subject to approval by the state Legislature.

Ficano has said he wants what's best for mental health clients and wants a "local solution" short of an independent authority.

At this stage, it looks like the commission will move ahead on an authority. It is also clear that the current state Legislature, which controls the purse strings, will not accept anything less.

It is time to move forward on creating an authority.

Deserving award

I read last week that Westland Observer Community Editor Sue Mason has been honored by the Wayne-Westland Board of Education for her professional and insightful coverage of school district events and issues.

As the person who hired her in the fall of 1985, I can enthusiastically concur with Ms. Mason's latest honor. Being involved with her journalistic career first as a competitor and later as her editor and more recently as a retiree who reads her stories and editorials, I can only comment, partly in jest, "What took so long for others to appreciate her talents and skills?"

Ms. Mason is an excellent example of someone who grew up in Westland, spent most of her adult life here and watched the school district and the community at large grow, mature, and change with the times.

At the Observer for more than 20 years, she has excelled in several positions but has really made her mark in serving as a community editor.

I hope the school district award is merely the latest. I must also comment that the Wayne-Westland school board and administration also deserve praise. It has been the most and transparent public institution I have ever dealt with as a community editor. The staff at all levels has always been professional, cooperative and helpful.

I devoted many of my Monday nights covering school board meetings as well as other events during the week and weekends. In covering Harry Howard from 1966 through Greg Baracy in 1999 when I retired, I feel the past and current administrators and their cabinet members also deserve public support for their ongoing professionalism.

We the People

Last year, I was able to attend some of our parades and celebrations of our Independence. So, what's the matter with "We the People"?

We who squeal the loudest don't show our Americanism to they that watch. I was appalled as our flag passed by the crowds and no one stood, placed their hand over their heart or saluted. That was a disgrace!

Come on, America! Have you forgotten what you were taught in school and by your parents? How will your children and others know the true meaning of our country and what it stands for, if you don't honor it? Do we truly know the meaning of our freedom? THINK what it's really all about and do something about it. This year's American patriotic celebrations are about to take place. Be thankful and show your spirit to all by honoring your flag when it passes by you.

My dear neighbor lady was straight from Poland. Each morning she walked our flag to the pole in her yard. She kissed the edge of it and raised it. Each evening, she came to take it down, kissed the edge of it. She told me, "You Americans don't know how good you got it." She also said, "Don't take it for granted."

One nation under God. May we all enjoy a blessed American Independence celebration.

Where's stroke awareness?

I volunteered to take in the American Stroke Association's main fund-raiser, Train To End Stroke, in January and have been trying to raise the target amount set by the association. The Train To End Stroke involves running or walking a marathon. I will be walking the marathon in San Diego, Calif., on June 4. I can't run because I had a stroke 15 years ago.

Strokes are the third leading cause of death and a cause of serious disability in the United States. Every 45 seconds someone in American has a stroke and every three minutes someone dies because of a stroke.

I contacted the Westland mayor, Sandra Cicirelli, and she was very good to me and I contact Peggy Ellenwood, the director of the Westland Friendship Center and met with her and the board, and was asked to take part in the Health and Fitness Day at the Friendship Center May 19.

Peggy had a table set up for me with a sign reading American Stroke Association and I brought pamphlets and other information for the people to take. I also was asking for donations to help me reach the target set by the American Stroke Association.

Peggy was very kind to me and has a donation jar at the center's main desk. She asked everyone at the Health and Fitness Day to donate to my cause. I was very surprised when people came up to my table and told either my wife or myself, they had never heard of the American Stroke Association, but what shocked us the most was some vendors had never heard of the American Stroke Association. These vendors have been to many shows and talk to many people, but didn't know about the American Stroke Association.

I knew then why it has been hard to raise funds. If people haven't heard of the organization, they will not donate money to it, and I can't blame them.

I don't understand why the American Stroke Association couldn't let people in the Detroit metro area know that there would be people out trying to raise funds for them. They are a part of the American Heart Association and very small it seems. You can call the office and the phone is answered the American Heart Association, nothing is said about the stroke part of it.

Detroit is a large city, but they are losing the Train To End Stroke program because it doesn't make enough money to pay for itself. You think if they let everyone know they are here they might make some money, but maybe the Heart Association won't let them. I would think there are many editors in newspapers that would gladly print a story about their fund-raising program as a feature article or article of interest and not charge them.

The same goes for TV, how many shows have health awareness on them and would be more than happy to announce the American Stroke Association's Train To End Stroke camaign, and the same for radio. But did they utilize any of these, no. That made it extra hard for us volunteers to raise the funds they said we had to if we wanted to take part in their program.

I have talked to many businesses in town that are good at letting groups raise funds in their place and was turned down or never heard back from them after sending or giving them the information they wanted.

The Westland Police and Fire Department would not even talk to me and we have supported every donation drive they have had. I think that has stopped, they could have at least talked to me or given the individual members the right to make up their own minds, if they wanted to support the American Stroke Association and myself in the Train To End Stroke campaign.

I didn't feel it right to go into the fire houses when there are signs saying only fire personnel and the same for the police, you can't get to them when they are in the station and don't want you to bother them while they are on the street.

At the Health and Fitness Day at the Friendship Center, the Fire Department and EMS were one table from us and they didn't even come over. I would say many of their calls are for people that have had a stroke. You would think they would like to see a reduction of strokes, but I guess not.

I am very happy to be taking part in this. The funds that are raised go toward research to end strokes and education of all of us. I don't think they are doing a good job on the education, if people don't even know about the American Stroke Association. I was able to at least inform some people at the Health and Fitness Day of them.

If anyone cares to donate you can go online to <http://teamdetroit.kintera.org/sandiego> and donate to anyone you know who is taking part in this.

You can also mail a donation to the American Stroke Association at 24445 Northwestern Highway, Southfield, MI 48075. Make your check out to American Stroke Association and write on it or a piece of paper who you want to donate for or just general donations.

Campaign 2006: Focus on jobs through creativity and change

In 1982, I served as deputy campaign manager for the first Jim Blanchard for governor campaign. Interest rates and unemployment were in double digits. I remember the top three campaign issues — jobs, jobs, jobs. Four years later, in the re-elect Blanchard for governor campaign the rallying cry was jobs, jobs and more jobs.

Bill Clinton rode to the presidency in 1992 during another economic downturn with the slogan, "It's the economy, stupid!"

With Michigan in a single state recession (some would say a depression in our urban areas), with unemployment at 7.2 percent compared to 4.2 percent for the rest of the country and more middle-class jobs to be shed as we transform our industrial economy, politicians from both sides of the political spectrum are dusting off the local and national slogans of the past to help make them the "jobs" candidate in 2006.

Certainly, we need entry-level jobs for teenagers and those new to the workforce. Yet, if Michigan is to be a state that provides hope and opportunity today and tomorrow, we need jobs that provide a livable middle-class wage with decent benefits. Further, we must never lose sight that behind unemployment statistic are workers without a paycheck, a family without income and a community and a state heading for stagnation and decline.

While "jobs" and other economic issues are again on everyone's mind as we stumble into the 2006 statewide elections, I beg to differ with politicians that will attempt to ride the "jobs wave" to victory in 2006. Election 2006 needs to be about more than simply "jobs," it also needs to be about results, innovation/creativity and change.

We need honest dialogue about what we need to do as individuals, families, communities and regions and as a state to be prepared to compete in this unforgiving, competitive global economy.

Unless we have leaders willing to address these issues, Michigan will continue to fall by the wayside as other states and nations pass us by. Unless we demand results, innovate in all we do, find ways to be more creative and change the way we address our problems we will not produce the high-paying, middle-class jobs of the future that our current displaced workers and children need and deserve.

Two governors, Mark Warner, a Democrat from Virginia, and Mitt Romney, Republican from Massachusetts, each from different geographical and political landscapes, provide examples of results.

Warner, a moderate Democrat in a Republican-leaning state and with a solid majority of Republicans in the Legislature, was able to reform Virginia's antiquated tax code and raise taxes to improve roads and schools. In fact, his leadership provided the single largest investment for K-12 school funding in Virginia's history. He has planted the seeds that will bear fruit for generations to come.

Romney rode his successful results of pulling the near disastrous, scandal-ridden Winter Olympics in Utah that were hundreds of millions in debt to the Massachusetts governor's office. As a Republican governor, he worked with one of the most Democratic Legislatures in the country to draft and sign into law the most comprehensive mandatory health care insurance program for all Massachusetts citizens, without raising taxes. Now those are results!

Michigan needs to accept the fact that the world has changed. What we once had as the manufacturing center of the universe is now gone. We have a new reality and what we make of it is up to us. We need to move boldly as pioneers into the future, not as settlers of the past. We need to build on our entrepreneurial strengths, leverage the talent of vast numbers of skilled workers and engineers centered in southeast Michigan and tap into our world-class community colleges and universities to create something new, not simply attempt to put an "addition" on what once was.

Some areas that are ripe (in fact, overly ripe) for change include:

- Available, reliable and affordable regional public transportation systems.

- Investment in students from preschool to graduate school and from the cradle to the grave to assure our children can compete not just with the school district or state next door, but with the children of the world.

- Massive investment in the retraining of the current workforce being displaced by the global, economic tsunami that has hit our shores. We cannot treat our current workforce as no deposit/no return, un-recyclable refuse.

- Regional collaboration and consolidation of schools districts, municipalities and other units of government to maximize efficiencies and effectiveness and for the better utilization of limited public resources.

Of course we need jobs and I expect everyone running for office from dog catcher to governor will be running on the "Jobs Ticket."

We also need bold decisive leadership that will help us not just fish for today's job, but help enable us to catch the decent-paying middle-class jobs of tomorrow. This will require an honest conversation with Michigan citizens regarding our critical needs.

Our collective future is predicated on results, innovation, creativity and change.

Lowering flag the least we can do for soldiers serving in war

I spent many years covering high school sports, and after seeing the American flag wrongly displayed in so many gyms, it came as no surprise to me to hear Mary Rowland of Canton was having trouble getting businesses to lower their American flags to half-staff to honor Michigan soldiers killed in Iraq.

I've seen the flag positioned on the wrong side of gyms, positioned with the stars in the wrong position, and with the American flag positioned wrongly when grouped with other flags.

One of the things I did during my 15-year U.S. Air Force career was answer questions about the proper display of the American flag, so I never had a problem pointing out the errors to athletic directors.

And the athletic directors in nearly every case, after checking to make sure I was right, made the appropriate changes to make sure the flag was accorded the respect it deserves.

That apparently is where my experience differs from Rowland, the Canton mom of a soldier recently assigned to Iraq. Rowland wants businesses to lower their flags when Gov. Jennifer Granholm calls for it following the death of a Michigan soldier, even though Granholm's authority extends only to state buildings. However, she's apparently running her suggestion up the wrong flagpole; only Flagstar Bank has given her a positive response.

"It makes me angry. Whether you are for or against the war, we have young men and women dying. It's too easy to forget we're in a war," she said.

As botched as the war has become, it shouldn't be difficult to remember we're in one. And judging by the turnout at Monday's Memorial Day parade in downtown Plymouth, fewer people have forgotten it than one might think.

While there is a feeling Memorial Day has become nothing more than a long weekend to many, the number of people crowded into Kellogg Park would suggest it means much more to many more.

I heard last week about some legislator somewhere wanting to make Memorial Day a permanent date — May 30, I think — no matter where it fell in the week, the thinking being perhaps people would pay more attention to the holiday's actual purpose: Honoring those who serve our nation, particularly those who have given the ultimate sacrifice.

I wanted to ask Brig. Gen. Carol Ann Fausone about that. But the Canton resident, the assistant adjutant for the state Department of Veterans Affairs and the featured speaker at Monday's parade, answered the question during her speech (actually, she answered it again when I asked it afterward, but the answer was the same).

"We need to salute the dedicated men and women serving this country today ... they are preserving the legacy (of freedom)," Fausone said. "Memorial Day is the one day of the year we set aside to honor them. We should be doing this every day of the year."

That's what Granholm aides say the governor is doing when she orders flags lowered, something she's done more than 60 times since December 2003.

Now, she's drawing criticism for doing it so often. Critics are saying it violates the U.S. Flag Code, which they say was intended to honor only high-ranking government and elected officials, not soldiers or National Guard members.

In an Associated Press story over the weekend, John Truscott, campaign spokesman for Republican Dick DeVos, said his guy "would take a more literal approach."

"While he certainly believes that honoring veterans who have given their lives is extremely important, lowering the flag has typically been reserved for heads of state."

So some high-ranking elected official — a president, for instance — who some say didn't even show up for National Guard duty, much less serve in a war, gets the flag lowered. But if Mary Rowland's boy dies while fighting for his country, DeVos is saying he shouldn't?

And this even sillier observation comes via the same AP story from Jeannine Trybus of Grand Rapids, who said "every time that flag comes down it cheapens the gesture." Trybus, a member of the Grand Rapids Civil War Roundtable, said this of lowering the flag for soldiers killed in the line of duty: "I don't think we should (be) denigrating one of our own symbols and its meaning."

Fausone, who actually serves her country, vigorously disagreed.

"The reason (Granholm) is doing it so much is we've lost so many," Fausone said. "They serve their country, and they sacrifice for their country. When (Granholm) lowers the flag, it's in their honor."

Dick DeVos is running against Granholm for governor, so you have to expect him to latch onto anything he can find. I have absolutely no idea whether Trybus is a DeVos supporter, but it wouldn't surprise me.

Chapen the gesture? Politicizing this particular issue is cheap. Lowering the flag to honor those who gave the ultimate sacrifice?

It's the least we can do.

Patterson: SBT initiative to go forward

BY ALEX LUNDBERG
STAFF WRITER

Despite a tight timeframe and discouraging early projections, Oakland County Executive L. Brooks Patterson's initiative to repeal the state's Single Business Tax will move forward to the petition phase.

At a press conference Tuesday afternoon, Patterson said the effort will move on. "I'm pleased to announce that we've reached our goal," he said. "We've taken in more than $615,000 in pledges and have another $185,000 in underwritten corporate loans."

Originally, the plan as announced at the State of the County address was to raise $800,000 in pledges for the effort. A week later, based on lackluster fund-raising, he amended that figure to $600,000. At the Tuesday conference, he said the fund-raising effort would continue as the petition drive got under way.

Whatever the financial goals set or met, he said the response to the effort was a sign that the times are ripe for change.

"To achieve numbers this strong is evidence that we're ready for change in Michigan," Patterson said.

Changes, he said, are needed. Citing statistics that place Michigan near or at the bottom of the heap for job creation, job retention and personal income growth, he said the SBT has to go to make the state a more attractive place to start or expand a business. Others have made similar, ground up changes in their tax and business structure.

"In the 1980s, Ireland was the doormat of Europe, not somewhere you would want to do business," he said. "Now it's the second strongest economy in Europe."

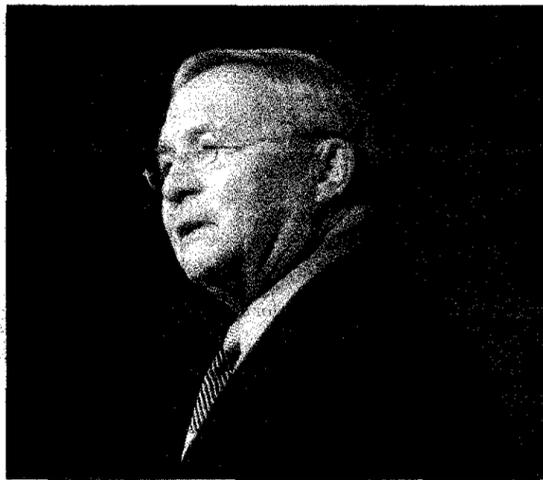

The SBT generates about

$1.8 billion in revenues for the state's general fund.

Patterson's plan says nothing about where replacement funds would come from. The petition drive, he said, would be an intervention for the state.

"The tax money is heroin for the state," he said. "This will force the legislature to rewrite the tax code."

A California firm, National Petition Management, has been secured to get the initiative on the November ballot. Patterson said the company has a 100 percent success rate in getting ballot questions before voters.

Patterson talks taxes with local business leaders

BY STACY JENKINS
STAFF WRITER

Steven Maltzman, a long-time CPA, has an easier time explaining out-of-state tax laws to his clients than he does explaining Michigan's single business tax.

"Businesses can lose real money and at the end of the day, there is a tax owed to the State of Michigan. It's mind-boggling," said Maltzman, a managing partner with MSW Group, PLC in Farmington Hills. "And, when I explain to my clients why, they get angry." His clients are mainly small businesses throughout the tri-county area.

"That's been our major problem - it's a very difficult tax to understand," he said.

Michigan is the only state in the nation with a single business tax, which basically taxes assets, payroll and property - not profits. Throughout its 31-year history, the single business tax has been enjoyed by profitable businesses in good economic times and despised by struggling businesses in tough economic times. In good times, businesses are not taxed on large profits, like they would be in other states. In tough times, businesses are taxed, even if profits are small.

"It's a disincentive for businesses to add employees to their companies," said Oakland County Executive L. Brooks Patterson, who is leading the charge to repeal the SBT before it is ready to sunset at the end of 2009.

Patterson said Michigan must act now.

"We can't wait until 2009 to help ourselves," said Patterson at a recent Farmington/Farmington Hills Chamber of Commerce luncheon, noting Michigan is in a "single state recession" with the highest unemployment and lowest economic stimulation of all states not hit by hurricanes.

"It's just awful news out there," said Patterson. "We're suffering through the longest recession since the Great Depression."

Patterson decided to tackle the tax by drafting petition language that calls for the issue to be placed on the ballot later this year.

The language mirrors legislation passed earlier this year by the Michigan House and Senate. The bills were vetoed by Gov. Jennifer Granholm because there was no plan to replace the estimated $1.8 billion the SBT generates each year.

Patterson hired a firm, for $810,000, to collect and certify at least 360,000 signatures, which is 106,000 more signatures than he needs. Petitions were filed Tuesday.

From there, the language is certified and it then goes back to the House and Senate for 40 days. Because the issue is brought by a ballot initiative, the House and Senate may approve it, making it a veto-proof law. The legislation would sunset the SBT in 2007.

"This would leave the governor as a spectator in this issue," said Patterson.

He's confident the plan will work. He said there are several options to replace most of the $1.8 billion generated by the SBT. But, he said only about $1.3 billion should be replaced.

Rouge Rescue has been a labor of love

BY KURT KUBAN
STAFF WRITER

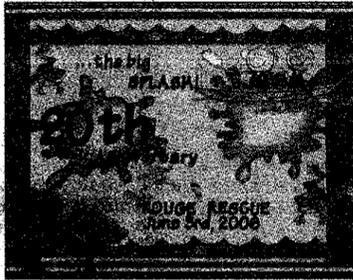

Two decades ago, many areas of the Rouge River could probably be compared to an open sewer. In fact, that's pretty much what they were. Raw sewage regularly coursed through the river after rain overburdened antiquated sewer systems. The river was also a depository for decades of trash - everything from old cars and appliances to shopping carts and just about anything else one might imagine.

That is the Rouge River that was inherited by a group of about 2,000 volunteers, who, in 1986, participated in the first Rouge Rescue. Their task: help jump-start the restoration of one of most polluted waterways in the country. Two decades later, as organizers prepare for the event's 20th anniversary, the river and the event itself have both come a long way.

Rouge Rescue is scheduled to take place Saturday in communities throughout the Rouge watershed. Organizers are expecting about 3,700 volunteers to come out to a total of 44 sites. They will find a very different river than those first volunteers had to deal with. In most areas of the watershed, most of the trash has been removed, and the water quality - thanks to upgraded sewer and stormwater systems - has improved dramatically.

As a result, Rouge Rescue isn't as daunting a task as it once was.

"As the Rouge has been restored, we're encouraging celebration, not just work," said Carolynne McCaughey, executive director of Friends of the Rouge, the organization that was born out of that first Rouge Rescue and has been coordinating the event ever since.

The Rouge Rescue is celebrating its 20th anniversary this year.

McCaughey said Rouge Rescue is no longer about picking up trash and tearing out logjams like it once was. At this year's event, volunteers will concentrate on other activities, including planting native plants and creating buffer strips along the river, as well as conducting nature walks. One site will even have poetry readings. As for the logjams, volunteers will take out only the trash and debris that has collecting in them, but not all the "woody debris" that is important wildlife habitat and helpful in preventing erosion.

"In the beginning Rouge Rescue was just pulling trash from the river. Unfortunately, some of that still needs to be done, but it has evolved over the years," McCaughey said. "We no longer rip logjams out of the river like we used to. Instead we do woody debris management. We really are starting to do a better job managing the river."

According to organizers, many of the volunteers that will come out Saturday have been coming out for years. Sharon Sabat has been coordinating Rouge Rescue in Livonia for years. In fact, she said the city actually had river cleanups before the first Rouge Rescue. Over the years, she has seen the same faces come out.

"We've had the same people with us, the same stalwarts, year after year. I think what keeps them coming back is the sense of accomplishment, and the fact we've gone from cleanup to reclamation," said Sabat, who is expecting about 50-60 people Saturday at the city's Rotary Park.

Livonia resident Michele Larson, who is coordinating Livonia's other site (also at Rotary Park), said the reason she got involved is a sense of ownership of the Rouge River. She said she and her two daughters often go down to the river to pick up trash.

"We're very conscious about our community and our environment," she said.

Find a 'purr-fect' match at a MHS center

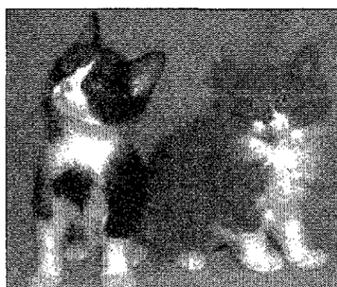

Have you been waiting to find that special companion? Maybe you've been looking for one who's sweet and affectionate, or perhaps you're hoping for one a little more independent?

Then the Michigan Humane Society has a "purr-fect" match for you - consider adopting a fabulous feline during Adopt a Cat Month this month.

Whatever your lifestyle, there is a cat or kitten sure to please. Cats are fascinating, affectionate and loving companions, each with their own personality.

Kittens are active, fun-loving and playful. Older cats are often more relaxed and content to curl up on warm laps or sunny windowsills.

"The warmer months lead to a significant increase in the number homeless cats and kittens arriving in our shelters daily, so June is the perfect time to add a furry friend to your family," said Jennifer Rowell, Detroit shelter manager for the Michigan Humane Society. "We encourage people to come out to our shelters and be 'adopted' by one of the loving cats awaiting a special person of their very own."

In addition to visiting the shelters, potential adopters can 'meet' many of the cats and kittens looking for new homes online at www.michiganhumane.org. Simply click on 'Adopt' to check out their photos and detailed descriptions.

The Michigan Humane Society's shelters in Detroit, Rochester Hills and Westland, have felines of every age, size, color and activity level, with everything going for them except a good home.

The adoption fee is $75 for a kitten under four months of age and $60 for those four months or older. Also, consider adding twice the love into your life by adopting two cats within 30 days and save 50 percent off the second adoption fee.

In addition to a lifetime of love, cat adoptions also include sterilization, age-appropriate vaccinations, a medical check-up and 10-day health plan.

Last year, nearly 20,000 stray and unwanted cats and kittens were sheltered and cared for by the Michigan Humane Society. For more information on adopting from the Michigan Humane Society, call 1-866-MHUMANE (648-6263), 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday or visit the Web site at www.michiganhumane.org.

This summer, Chris Haddad (left) and Karen Buddenborg unite to teach kids about the fun of playing tennis.

Kids can learn to play tennis the fun way

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER

Karen Buddenborg and Chris Haddad have one goal – to introduce kids to tennis the fun way.

The game not only encourages fitness, but friendship. The two Livonia women met 16 years ago on a tennis court at the Livonia YMCA. On June 13, they begin a new adventure teaching Little Tennis to children ages 7 to 11, at the Livonia City Tennis Courts on the southwest corner of Five Mile and Newburgh.

The cost is $65 for a 6-class session. Kids use lower nets and lighter equipment to learn basic skills while playing games such as Four Corner Relay, Silly Tennis and Rallyball.

"The sessions are game based approach and geared to kids developmental stages," said Haddad. "In the past tennis was taught in a laborious manner. There were 10 stages to learn proper forehand."

But Little Tennis isn't all fun and games. Designed by the U.S. Professional Tennis Association (USPTA), the structured program takes children through a series of stages to actually learn the game.

Haddad and Buddenborg are USPTA certified instructors who have won tournament championships as a doubles team. They have taught tennis to kids at the Livonia Recreation Center, Plymouth-Canton Community Ed after school program, and Lifetime Fitness in Novi where students were as young as 3-years old.

"This is more team oriented," said Buddenborg. "Kids learn it's fun being outside on a real court."

Buddenborg and Haddad will offer three, six-class sessions beginning June 13, July 11, and Aug. 1. Classes run 9-10 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Registration will be held at the City Tennis Courts 6-8 p.m. Thursday, June 1, and 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, June 3. For more information, call Haddad at (734) 591-0487, Buddenborg at (734) 464-0279, or send e-mail to kbudd5@aol.com, or chris@georgesvideo.com.

"Tennis is one of those sports you can play forever," said Haddad. "It's a sport for an entire lifetime. There's no reason why little kids can't enjoy it."

"We know that what we do today will have repercussions on future generations."

After 20 years, McCaughey believes Rouge Rescue has made a huge difference, both in the appearance of the river and the way people perceive it.

"It's made a big difference, because so many people now appreciate the Rouge instead of looking at it as a cesspool," she said. "Every time you get a new person out there, there is this 'wow' factor, because people just don't know what's there until they experience it. That is probably the biggest impact Rouge Rescue has had."

WALTER H. EKBERG, Jr.

Age 84, died peacefully on May 26 in Portland, Oregon, after fulfilling a wonderful life. He was husband to his best friend and love of his life, Mary, for 64 glorious years. Walt was a great Dad to his son Jim Ekberg and daughters Jo Anne Lewis and Jan Brown. He was Grandpa to Geoff, Doug, Jenny, Nikki, Ian, David, and Sarah; and Great-Grandfather to Zachary, Henry, Elizabeth, Lily, Joshua, and Seth; and big brother to Robert Ekberg of Grandville, MI. Walt and his wife, Mary, were Michigan State sweethearts and graduates, and Walt was member of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity. They lived many years in Birmingham, MI, and were active in the Christian Science Church. Walt served in the U.S. Navy during WWII and the Korean War. Born and raised in Royal Oak, MI, he started his career at Ford Motor Company, Dearborn, and always drove a Ford. He served the remainder of his career as Comptroller for A. J. Miller, Inc. in Royal Oak. Walt and Mary semi-retired in 1983 to Newcastle, Maine where they ran a small gift shop, called "The Maine Sale", out of their charming 1800's home by the sea. They fell in love with Maine and stayed there, happily, for 22 years. In April 2005 they moved to Portland, Oregon, to be near their son, Jim, who would lovingly care for them. Walt was a true gentleman, a loving husband and father, with a good, pure, and generous heart. He left his family with wonderful memories and 110 beautifully written personal essays. He will truly be missed. A service is not planned. Naturally, he didn't want one. But one day, the ashes of the mariner he once was will rejoin the sea on a slack tide at the Damariscotta River Bridge in Maine, just down the street from their Maine shang-ri-la. If you care to send a memorial donation in his name, please send to: First Church of Christ Scientist, P. O. Box 428, Damariscotta, ME 04543

Conference for Christian Scholars to be held at Rochester College

Rochester College will host the 25th Annual Christian Scholars Conference June 29-July 1. The conference was created in 1981 under the direction of Dr. Thomas H. Olbricht, scholar and faculty in both communication and religious studies. First hosted on the campus of Abilene Christian University, CSC moved with Olbricht to Pepperdine University in the mid '80s. In the mid '90s CSC began to re-locate each year at selected university campuses associated with Churches of Christ. Rochester College will host the conference in 2006 and for four successive years. The CSC calls together Christian scholars from a wide variety of disciplines in the liberal arts and sciences to develop their own academic research and to reflect on the integration of scholarship and faith. Specifically, the conference asks academics to consider how their spiritual heritage serves and strengthens the Christian academy and scholarship within their discipline. The 2006 conference features five plenary sessions with more than 20 discipline-specific sessions. This year's theme is "Mind, Word and World: Christian Scholarship, Scripture and Political Realities." Dr. Richard Hays, Duke University, will present two keynote talks with the opening session entitled, "The Scripture Project: Reading in Community and Dialogue with Those Outside the Christian Community." The 2006 Conference will introduce an African American Studies Section chaired by Dr. David Holmes, professor of English at Pepperdine. Additionally, to encourage, mentor and support African American Scholars amongst Churches of Christ, travel and registration stipends are available to encourage fuller representation in all academic disciplines from African American scholars. More information on the stipends and the conference is available at www.rc.edu/csc or directly from Fleer at (248)218-2144. Rochester College is located at 800 W. Avon Road, Rochester Hills.

Cantata celebrates freedom around the world

Cong. Shaarey Zedek in Southfield presents a momentous concert with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra at 8 p.m. Thursday, June 29, at Orchestra Hall in the Max M. Fisher Music Center. The performance, designed to be a grand communal and inter-faith event, features the cantata Liberation, composed by Shaarey Zedek Cantor Meir Finkelstein. Leading the orchestra will be Yoel Levi, chief conductor of the Flemish Radio Orchestra and principal guest conductor of the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra. Underwritten by Alvin and Henrietta Weisberg and the Laker Family, the concert will feature the 140 member Vanguard Voices from Dearborn, as well as guest violin soloist Ittai Shapira and several vocal soloists. These include Finkelstein, Cantor Michael Smolash and cantorial soloist Neil Michaels of Temple Israel, and Cantor Stephen Dubov of Chayeh Olam. Also appearing are Inga Filippova, a member of the Canadian Opera Co. Chorus and Margarita Boshoe, a well-known Russian soprano. Many of Detroit's religious leaders will participate in dramatic readings that introduce various movements of the cantata. Designed as a fundraiser in support of the congregation's educational and cultural programs, the concert will feature benefactor and patron tickets that include VIP seating, your name in the program and an afterglow. Liberation was composed in 1995 for the 50th anniversary of the liberation of the Nazi death camps. The inspiring and moving work was recently updated by Finkelstein. It not only memorializes Holocaust victims, but gives awareness of the ongoing genocides that continue to plague mankind all over the world. "There is an urgent need to focus on the many millions across the world who are in desperate need of liberation from poverty, hunger, and torture," says Finkelstein, who uses eclectic musical styles, ranging from classical to gospel, to express the exhilaration of being liberated. Tickets range from $24 to $300. They are available at the Max M. Fisher Music Center box office, (313)576-5111, or Cong. Shaarey Zedek at (248)357-5544. Tickets can also be purchased 24-hours-a-day at www.detroitssymphony.com.
